COUNTY SHOWS SALES TAX JUMP IN LAST MONTH

Pickaway One Of State's Few Districts To Boost Receipts

$1,913 STAMPS CANCELLED

Treasurer Reports Figures Of Collections From All Sections

Pickaway county was one of the few counties in the state which showed an increase in sales tax collection for the week ending Dec. 3 over the corresponding week in 1937.

Sales tax collections in the county for the week totalled $1,913 as compared with $1,640 last year. Figures released by Clarence H. Knisley, state treasurer, showed collections for the state for the week ending Dec. 3 were $1,600, which is $66,000 less than for the sale period last year.

An analysis of the tax receipts between Jan. 1, and Nov. 5, 1938, show the average tax paid per person was $2.37 as compared with $2.95 for the same period in 1937.

Collections in Pickaway county for 1938 up to Dec. 3 amounted to $71,387 as compared with $87,385 in 1937. The collections for the year in the state are $35,700,000 as compared with $46,700,000 for 1937.

R. G. Colville, county treasurer, has closed the books on the October collection of personal property taxes and returned the duplicate to Auditor Forrest Short. A distribution will be announced in about three weeks.

Collection of classified taxes amounted to $4,503.67. The total on tangible personal taxes was $12,487.46.

THIEF WHO TOOK DOCTOR'S KIT OF SUPPLIES HUNTED

A thief interested in medicine was being sought Friday by the sheriff's department in the theft of a black Boston bag from the parked car of Dr. R. S. Hosler, Ashville, Thursday evening. Dr. Hosler's car was parked near his office in the village.

The bag contained a blood pressure instrument, kit of other instruments, flashlight, bandages, adhesive, cotton, rubber gloves and 25 bottles of medicine, officers were told.

Previous to the theft of the bag the sheriff received a call that an auto had been stolen in the village, but a few minutes later it was reported recovered.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff said the car of Paul Accord, Ashville Route 2, was parked near the Kaiserman store. A man drove the car to the rear of the grocery then fled. Nothing was reported missing from the car, the sheriff said, but the motor was left running. Descriptions of the man varied.

Italy Claims Jewish Riches

Cabinet Provides Limits on Properties, All Remainder to Become Government's

ROME, Dec. 16.—(UP)—The cabinet today approved a decree obliging Italian Jews to register all their property.

Those Jews who own property exceeding limits outlined in a decree promulgated Nov. 17 will be obliged to turn over the excess to a government agency, which is to liquidate it and hand back the proceeds to the owners in the form of special government bonds bearing interest at 4 percent.

The Nov. 17 decree forbade Jews to hold city real estate on which the annual tax exceeded $1,505, farm land on which the tax exceeded, $263, or to manage any business which employed more than 100 persons.

Jews who hold bonds or other property connected with the national defense must sell it to a government agency, which will pay for it in the special 4 percent bonds.

The cabinet also approved a decree making the four Libyan provinces an integral part of Italy and conferring "special Italian citizenship" on Libyan Moslems.

It was announced that the cabinet would meet again March 13 to consider reform of the school system to conform to the new racial laws.

MORE OFFICERS OF SHOW SOCIETY TO BE CHOSEN

A special meeting of the Pickaway County Agricultural society, sponsor of the annual Pumpkin Show, will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. for additional nomination of directors.

Under the new by-laws of the organization it is understood the president and secretary must be nominated. Under former regulations of the society, followed for many years, the mayor served as president of the organization by virtue of his office and appointed the secretary. George Roth has served as secretary.

Directors will be named Dec. 29 at an election to be held in the council chamber. By-laws of the organization are being rewritten to comply with state regulations for the operation of county fairs.

The number of directors will be increased for 1939 so some of the larger departments of the show may be divided. Members believe the departments can be handled more efficiently and more interest created in them if they are separated.

COUNTY PASTOR ACCEPTS PULPIT AT BAINBRIDGE

The Rev. R. M. Morris, pastor of the New Holland and Atlanta Methodist Episcopal churches for the last three years, Friday, was appointed as minister of the Bainbridge Methodist church to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Dr. Russell H. Bready, 62.

The Rev. Mr. Morris was chosen over four other applicants by the church's official board at a meeting Thursday evening. He accepted the position at a substantial increase in salary. He will assume his new duties Sunday.

A successor in the New Holland-Atlanta charge has not been appointed.

Dr. Berady was slain by his son, Robert, who recently returned after fighting in the Spanish Civil war.

BRICKER SAYS NO NEW TAXES NEEDED IN OHIO

Governor-Elect Plans To Incorporate Relief In General Fund

ECONOMIES TO BE URGED

Ear-Marking To Be Ended Under His Program, Republican Hints

COLUMBUS, Dec. 16—(UP)—Plans to incorporate relief financing in the regular revenue laws of the state and to deal with the entire relief system in a "business-like" method were outlined today by Governor-Elect John W. Bricker.

Instead of resorting to the usual "stop gap" method of financing relief by periodic emergency legislation of a temporary nature, Bricker indicated that he will ask the incoming state legislature to make provision for relief expenditures in the regular state budget.

The governor-elect also said that he is "seriously considering" a plan to abolish ear-marking of taxes for special purposes and to urge legislation which would throw all state revenus into the general revenue fund.

All In General Fund

Appropriations for schools, relief, and old age pensions would be made from this general fund, under the plan.

In this way, Bricker pointed out, school authorities, for instance, would know exactly how much they would receive in state aid each year, and would not be forced to borrow if revenues did not come up to expectations.

Bricker said that "proper economies" in state government would enable the state to meet school and relief needs with no new taxes.

He said that some provision for relief will be made in the temporary budget which he will submit to the legislature on taking office. state activities are always financing on a temporary basis until the incoming legislature has had an opportunity to study the regular biennial appropriations bill.

Bricker said that he would not "try to tell the legislature what to do," but that many tax experts are coming to the belief that state finances would be better adminis-

HOPKINS HINTED AS CHOICE FOR COMMERCE JOB

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16—(UP)—The resignation of Secretary of Commerce Roper focused attention today on the growing list of vacant key government posts and increased speculation on possible appointees.

Roper's retirement, which becomes effective Dec. 23, will leave two places open in the cabinet; Attorney-General Cummings' resignation becomes effective Jan. 1. In addition, there are vacancies in the supreme court, the White House secretariat, the treasury, federal reserve board, the general accounting office and the budget bureau.

A threatening third vacancy in the cabinet was eliminated by Secretary of the Interior Ickes' announcement that he would not seek the Chicago mayoralty. There have been persistent rumors, too that Postmaster General Farley might retire if he accepts one of the important business posts which are said to have been offered him.

Most prominently mentioned to succeed Roper is Works Progress Administrator Hopkins, although it is reported that Roper has indicated hope for appointment of some other person.

Sharp U. S. Note Finds Nazis Cool

Washington Seeks Definite Ruling On Status Of Jewish Residents

BERLIN, Dec. 16.—Foreign observers expressed doubt today that the United States would succeed, despite a sharp note sent to foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop yesterday, in getting a clear cut statement that American Jews would not be subjected to discrimination in the Nazi anti-Jewish drive.

The United States note was regarded here as an effort to get a final ruling on American Jews, after the failure of previous representations to elicit a satisfactory reply.

Nevertheless in diplomatic quarters there was little belief that the new note would be accorded a direct answer.

The present exchange between the United States and Germany is based on the American-German treaty of friendship of 1926, in which each nation guaranteed to citizens of the other equal treatment within its boundaries to that which its own citizens received.

All Citizens Included

The United States holds that, as regards that anti-Jewish campaign, the treaty includes all American citizens regardless of race. The Nazi government holds that it is obligated under the treaty merely to accord American

ALASKAN STORM ENDANGERS 13 OF SHIP'S CREW

JUNEAU, Alaska, Dec. 16—(UP)—A wind and rain storm threatened to turn into a blizzard today and freeze 18 men shipwrecked on the shores of Cape Fairweather, approximately 400 miles south of the Arctic circle.

Hovering around beach fires since their famous old trading ship Patterson went ashore last Monday, the men flashed signals to coast-guardsmen that many of them needed medical treatment, Some, they said, were unable to walk.

The signals were made by flashlight to the coast guard Haida which has been unable to land a small boat and rescue the men because of pounding surf.

Word of the injuries dashed hopes that the party could make its way overland to Lituya bay, 25 miles south. The coast guard and naval seaplanes from the new naval air base at Sitka could pick them up there.

A private seaplane piloted by Sheldon Simmons attempted to reach Lituya bay with three veteran guides who planned to go to the aid of the stranded men and bring them back to the bay. Weather forced the plane down short its goal.

The patrol boat Morris was dispatched from Juneau to aid the Haida in the hope a shore party could be landed before the blizzard sweeped down and possibly froze all the shipwrecked men to death.

CONFERENCE OF AMERICAS MAY DENY PROPOSAL

Uruguay And Other Powers Oppose Suggestion By Delegates

TRADE BARRIERS TALKED

Berle Denies U. S. To Put Navy, Plane Bases In Southern Nations

LIMA, Peru, Dec. 16—(UP)—Cuba proposed to the pan-American conference today that the American republics attempt mediation of the Spanish civil war.

The Cuban proposal was opposed by Uruguay, among others. The steering committee will meet tomorrow to decide.

Other matters coming before the conference today were projects for continental solidarity among the 21 republics and lowering of trade barriers.

Mexican and Argentine delegates had cooperated in preparing a solidarity resolution, a redraft of one circulated by United States delegates. The Mexican-Argentine draft proposed an unwritten American front against armed aggression from outside and against cultural and other foreign penetration into the Americas, but it was much milder in tone than the original draft prepared by Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

To Lower Barriers

An American proposal for lowering trade barriers, which Hull intended to submit, was understood to reaffirm trade principles agreed on at previous pan-American conferences and to call on all nations to lower tariffs as much as possible.

As regards continental solidarity, there was a chance that Peru would introduce a proposal of its own and a possibility that Brazil also would submit one.

The conference steering committee was called to meet this morning and a plenary meeting was set for this afternoon.

Today was the deadline for submitting projects for approval by the full conference. Then projects

WALLACE TAKES WEST'S PLACE AS VEHICLE CHIEF

COLUMBUS, Dec. 16 — (UP)—Cy W. Wallace, Toledo, was designated today by Governor-elect John W. Bricker as his choice for state registrar of motor vehicles.

Bricker announced selection of Wallace after a meeting with Lt. Col. Robert S. Beightler, Columbus, who will make the appointment as highway director in the Bricker cabinet.

Wallace will succeed Frank West in the bureau of motor vehicles. The position of registrar carries a salary of $5,000.

Wallace for a number of years was employed by the Toledo Edison Co. During the campaign he helped direct the Republican fight in Lucas county. He has been active in civic affairs and is a former president of the Toledo chamber of commerce.

UNION OFFICIAL KILLED AS FIRE DESTROYS HOME

CINCINNATI, Dec. 16—(UP)—Frank Hammer, 48, secretary and business agent of Truck Drivers' and Teamsters' union No. 100, died in a fire that destroyed his home here today despite an attempt of his 14 year old son to save his life.

Three of Hammer's 10 motherless children were injured. Seven of them jumped from a porch roof.

Hammer, whose wife burned to death 11 years ago, apparently was overcome by smoke when he ran into a bedroom to recover valuables. His son, Thomas, was cut on the right foot while trying to reach his father.

Patrolman's Kidnapers To Serve Long Terms

LEBANON, Dec. 16—(UP)—Two men and two women who pleaded guilty to charges of kidnaping State Highway Patrolman Parker W. Powell on Dec. 8 were sentenced today to five to 30 years imprisonment on the kidnaping charge and to 10 to 25 years on an armed robbery charge.

Sentence was passed by Judge Charles B. Dechant in Common Pleas court on Coy Russell, 29, Houston, Tex.; David I. Cross, 29, Hamilton, Pa.; Marie Day, 25, alias Hatfield, Ashland, Ky., and Namoi Hayes, 25, Steele, Mo.

The men will be imprisoned in Ohio penitentiary at Columbus and the women in Marysville women's reformatory. Judge Dechant ruled that the men's sentences must be served consecutively, but that the women's sentences might be served concurrently.

The case was disposed of quickly after Prosecutor C. D. Dilatush and Sheriff William Hufford received reports that suspicious-appearing persons had been seen here this week.

Corporal Powell was abducted when he questioned the four persons after an automobile collision in which their car figured. He was released a short time later unharmed. All four of his kidnapers were captured within a few hours during one of the biggest searches ever organized by Ohio authorities.

Russell and Cross admitted bank holdups and minor robberies in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma and other states.

DRUG BUSINESS HEAD EXPOSED AS EX-CONVICT

'F. Donald Coster', Named As Swindler, Fires Bullet Through Head

REAL NAME PHILIP MUSICA

Wall Street Associates Shocked; Connecticut Town Amazed

NEW YORK, Dec. 16—(UP)—F. Donald Coster, one of the boldest swindlers of the century, killed himself at his suburban estate at Fairfield Conn., today as investigating agencies unearthed increasingly fantastic facts of his activities as president of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., the nation's third largest drug firm.

Exposed as Philip Musica, eldest brother and "brains" of the swindling Musica family which perpetrated a $1,000,000 "human hair" larceny in 1912, Coster put a bullet through his head as U. S. authorities closed in on him in the drug company scandal.

Long Career Ended

His suicide ended a swindling career which extended nearly 40 years, the first 20 as a brilliant daring Philip Musica, and the second as the mild mannered and apparently conservative F. Donald Coster.

The unmasking of Coster as a man with an unsavory past was the second blow to fall on his associates in Wall street. His firm, third largest of its kind in the world, with $81,000,000 listed assets and a $174,000,000 annual business, had failed two weeks ago with an $18,000,000 shortage. It was a shortage not of cash but of tangible goods—huge warehouses stocked with drugs—that had been carried on the books but did not exist.

The enigma of "Coster" was comparable only to that of his company.

Millions Loaned Him

He had the admiration and respect of the leading financiers; they had lent him $20,000,000 and distributed $16,000,000 worth of his firm's bonds so that he could expand his business—he had spent three years in prison for perpetrating a celebrated "human hair" swindle that cost his backers more than $1,000,000 25 years ago.

He pulled his company through the depression with an untarnished credit rating—his first business venture as a youth had been smuggling Italian cheese.

He had written a brilliant biography for himself in the latest edition of Who's Who—he had been charged with perjury in 1920 during trial of the Barnet Baff "chicken dealer" murder case.

Who's Who recorded him as having received a doctor's degree at Heidelburg university in 1909—he was in Elmira, N. Y., reformatory in 1909 for smuggling cheese.

Arrested at Mansion

Coster-Musica was under technical arrest in his palatial Spanish style mansion at Fairfield, Conn. He was indicted yesterday by a federal grand jury, charged with having filed false statements with the New York Stock Exchange regarding securities sold to the public.

As yet, alcohol and gun running phases of the story were vague. Assistant Attorney General Brien McMahon had announced in Washington that the justice department had found evidence indicating a conspiracy to export arms in cases labeled "milk of magnesia." He said that "leads are now being run down which indicate that Coster has been involved in a conspiracy to ship arms and ammunition to beligerent nations

WALLACE TAKES WEST'S PLACE AS VEHICLE CHIEF

COLUMBUS, Dec. 16 — (UP)—Cy W. Wallace, Toledo, was designated today by Governor-elect John W. Bricker as his choice for state registrar of motor vehicles.

Bricker announced selection of Wallace after a meeting with Lt. Col. Robert S. Beightler, Columbus, who will make the appointment as highway director in the Bricker cabinet.

Wallace will succeed Frank West in the bureau of motor vehicles. The position of registrar carries a salary of $5,000.

Wallace for a number of years was employed by the Toledo Edison Co. During the campaign he helped direct the Republican fight in Lucas county. He has been active in civic affairs and is a former president of the Toledo chamber of commerce.

UNION OFFICIAL KILLED AS FIRE DESTROYS HOME

CINCINNATI, Dec. 16—(UP)—Frank Hammer, 48, secretary and business agent of Truck Drivers' and Teamsters' union No. 100, died in a fire that destroyed his home here today despite an attempt of his 14 year old son to save his life.

Three of Hammer's 10 motherless children were injured. Seven of them jumped from a porch roof.

Hammer, whose wife burned to death 11 years ago, apparently was overcome by smoke when he ran into a bedroom to recover valuables. His son, Thomas, was cut on the right foot while trying to reach his father.

Patrolman's Kidnapers To Serve Long Terms

LEBANON, Dec. 16—(UP)—Two men and two women who pleaded guilty to charges of kidnaping State Highway Patrolman Parker W. Powell on Dec. 8 were sentenced today to five to 30 years imprisonment on the kidnaping charge and to 10 to 25 years on an armed robbery charge.

Sentence was passed by Judge Charles B. Dechant in Common Pleas court on Coy Russell, 29, Houston, Tex.; David I. Cross, 29, Hamilton, Pa.; Marie Day, 25, alias Hatfield, Ashland, Ky., and Namoi Hayes, 25, Steele, Mo.

The men will be imprisoned in Ohio penitentiary at Columbus and the women in Marysville women's reformatory. Judge Dechant ruled that the men's sentences must be served consecutively, but that the women's sentences might be served concurrently.

The case was disposed of quickly after Prosecutor C. D. Dilatush and Sheriff William Hufford received reports that suspicious-appearing persons had been seen here this week.

Corporal Powell was abducted when he questioned the four persons after an automobile collision in which their car figured. He was released a short time later unharmed. All four of his kidnapers were captured within a few hours during one of the biggest searches ever organized by Ohio authorities.

Russell and Cross admitted bank holdups and minor robberies in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma and other states.

DRUG BUSINESS HEAD EXPOSED AS EX-CONVICT

'F. Donald Coster', Named As Swindler, Fires Bullet Through Head

REAL NAME PHILIP MUSICA

Wall Street Associates Shocked; Connecticut Town Amazed

NEW YORK, Dec. 16—(UP)—F. Donald Coster, one of the boldest swindlers of the century, killed himself at his suburban estate at Fairfield Conn., today as investigating agencies unearthed increasingly fantastic facts of his activities as president of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., the nation's third largest drug firm.

Exposed as Philip Musica, eldest brother and "brains" of the swindling Musica family which perpetrated a $1,000,000 "human hair" larceny in 1912, Coster put a bullet through his head as U. S. authorities closed in on him in the drug company scandal.

Long Career Ended

His suicide ended a swindling career which extended nearly 40 years, the first 20 as a brilliant daring Philip Musica, and the second as the mild mannered and apparently conservative F. Donald Coster.

The unmasking of Coster as a man with an unsavory past was the second blow to fall on his associates in Wall street. His firm, third largest of its kind in the world, with $81,000,000 listed assets and a $174,000,000 annual business, had failed two weeks ago with an $18,000,000 shortage. It was a shortage not of cash but of tangible goods—huge warehouses stocked with drugs—that had been carried on the books but did not exist.

The enigma of "Coster" was comparable only to that of his company.

Millions Loaned Him

He had the admiration and respect of the leading financiers; they had lent him $20,000,000 and distributed $16,000,000 worth of his firm's bonds so that he could expand his business—he had spent three years in prison for perpetrating a celebrated "human hair" swindle that cost his backers more than $1,000,000 25 years ago.

He pulled his company through the depression with an untarnished credit rating—his first business venture as a youth had been smuggling Italian cheese.

He had written a brilliant biography for himself in the latest edition of Who's Who—he had been charged with perjury in 1920 during trial of the Barnet Baff "chicken dealer" murder case.

Who's Who recorded him as having received a doctor's degree at Heidelburg university in 1909—he was in Elmira, N. Y., reformatory in 1909 for smuggling cheese.

Arrested at Mansion

Coster-Musica was under technical arrest in his palatial Spanish style mansion at Fairfield, Conn. He was indicted yesterday by a federal grand jury, charged with having filed false statements with the New York Stock Exchange regarding securities sold to the public.

As yet, alcohol and gun running phases of the story were vague. Assistant Attorney General Brien McMahon had announced in Washington that the justice department had found evidence indicating a conspiracy to export arms in cases labeled "milk of magnesia." He said that "leads are now being run down which indicate that Coster has been involved in a conspiracy to ship arms and ammunition to beligerent nations barred from receiving arms and ammunition under the neutrality act."

The suggestion of alcohol traffic came from Ambrose V. McCall, assistant New York attorney general in charge of a public hearing here. He has hammered at witnesses repeatedly on the fact that Coster's enterprises have involved handling alcohol since he first appeared on the New York financial scene in 1925 under the name of Coster, seeking financial backing to expand his little hair tonic business at Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

No Word In Defense

Although his past evidently had caught up with him, and the charges already filed were enough to imprison him for 10 years, the mild-mannered convict-turned-industrialist declined to say a word in defense. Directors of his company, and two officials who were indicted with him were in conference at his home until the early hours today. His lawyer, Samuel Reich, left the house with only this to say: "There's plenty doing about this fantastic thing and you can expect to hear a great deal more. I can't give details now without violating confidence."

The shock to the Coster family's neighbors in Fairfield was said to have been nothing compared to that to Wall street financiers. He had done little entertaining in Conneticut and his guest had been mostly visitors from out of town. He spent most of his time on his 100-foot ocean going yacht, the Carolita, built in Germany in 1922.

The fingerprint identification was made last night, and announced by Inspector Joseph J. Donovan of the New York police. Wednesday, when he was arraigned his home on the S. E. C. complaint, Coster's prints had been taken by federal officers. The prints were sent here for checking and before they were found to be Musica's, the grand jury already had returned the indictment.

Although his police record was extensive, and the disposition of some of the charges once made against him was vague, it was believed that he had settled all debts to society as Musica, and that he was presently involved only in the affairs of McKesson and Robbins as Coster.

Company In Court

The company was deeply enmeshed in legal proceedings — stockholders' suits, a petition for reorganization, S. E. C. investigations, bondholders' protective actions, and under suspension from the stock exchange, and the effect of the $18,000,000 shortage was uncertain. It was agreed, however, that the shortage was enough to wipe out the company's common stock, of which Coster held 10 percent and control.

Informed of his true identity, Coster's associates recalled today that he had always been regarded as something of a man of mystery in the industrial world. Nobody had known him before 1922, but that had been attributed to the possibility that he had risen from obscurity in the boom days and that who he had been and what he had done before that had been inconsequential.

The records showed now that the contrary was true.

Philip Musica was born in New York in 1884, of Italian immigrant parents. They lived at first in poverty on the lower East side. The father, Antonio Musica, was a barber. He saved up enough money to open a small importing shop, dealing in foodstuffs from Italy which founds a ready market among other Italian immigrants here.

As a boy, Philip showed business acumen. He prevailed on his father who was reluctant, to expand their business and concentrate on the Italian cheese market. Their fortunes rose rapidly after Philip began passing bribes among weighers at the customs office to falsify the invoices on their cheese imports.

Son Accepted Blame

When they were caught, Philip made a dramatic gesture in court by shouldering the entire blame. His father consequently was exonerated and Philip was sentenced to prison for a year.

In six months he was out, on a pardon signed by President Taft. He returned to New York and evolved another scheme for his father—the human hair business. Women's styles in those days—1910—ran to high coiffures and false hair was in demand. Good hair, of long lengths, was worth $800 a pound. Philip and his father formed the United States Hair company. They thrived and moved to a large house with an expansive lawn and stables for horses. Philip became a dude and mingled with the opera society. He met financiers and entertained stage celebrities.

In 1913 Philip went to the Bank of Manhattan company, informed the executives that he had 216 cases of the finest human hair, worth $370,000. He wanted to borrow the full amount on bills of lading and bills of exchange on the hair. The bank lent him only $25,000. A few days later, a clerk noticed that the figures on the bills of lading appeared to have been tampered with. An investigation was made at the Brooklyn pier where the hair was stored. It was of the cheapest variety—worth $250.

Home Empty

Policemen went to the Musica home. The family had evacuated with most of the furnishings. This news startled the American Bankers association which learned at once that the Anglo-South American bank held eight worthless drafts from Musica drawn on foreign firms, and that the banking house of J. and W. Seligman had lent Musica $17,000 on false invoices. Further investigation disclosed that 22 banks had been defrauded of $1,000,000.

Burns agency detectives found the Musica family's trial followed it to New Orleans. Aboard a boat, ready to leave for Honduras, they found them, listed on the manifest as the Martin family.

Louise Musica, Philip's sister, ran from the stateroom and tried to throw a package overboard. It was taken from her and found to contain $18,000 in currency. Other members of the family had $80,000 among them.

Philip had paid up insurance policies for $225,000. Philip seized a gun, shouting he wanted to kill himself. He was restrained.

Philip again pleaded guilty and absolved his father. He spent three years in prison helping authorities straighten out his manipulations. In 1916, three years after his arrest, he was given a suspended sentence.

In the meantime, in 1914, while Philip was in the tombs, a chicken dealer named Barnet Baff had been murdered. Philip Musica entered the case in 1920, when, in some manner, he obtained a job as investigator, or "stool pigeon," for the district attorney's office. Joseph Cohen went on trial for the Baff murder and Musica presented the district attorney's office with an affidavit saying he had heard Cohen and other gangsters plotting the murder in prison. He also got two witnesses for the state, Hyman Berger and George Davis, whom he said he met in jail.

Perjury Rumored

Cohen was sentenced to death but rumors of perjury caused Gov. Alfred E. Smith to commute the sentence to life imprisonment. Musica was indicted for subornation of perjury, charged with having inducted the witnesses to testify falsely against Cohen. He had left the district attorney's employ and was found at work for a lawyer who was defending some of the men involved in the Baff case. There was no record of Musica having served time on the perjury charge, and from that time until today his name was never again in the news.

F. Donald Coster appeared in New York in 1925 seeking a loan to expand his business. It was a hair tonic firm, Girard and company, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., dealing in standard brands and doing a good business. The records showed that Coster had been its president since 1922. He applied at the banking firm of Bond and Goodwin, and Julian F. Thompson of that company was assigned to investigate his standing.

It looked to Thompson like a good investment. He got Coster additional bank credits.

The following year Coster approached Thompson again. He wanted $1,000,000 to buy McKesson and Robbins Manufacturing company, a drugs firm of almost 100 years good standing. It had been established in 1883 by John McKesson and Daniel C. Robbins. McKesson's grandsons, Irving and Donald McKesson, were then in dispute with other stockholders and it had been decided to split the firm. The McKessons took the chemical manufacturing business and allied lines, and the other stockholders took the medicinal departments and the company name. It was the latter branch in which Coster was interested.

Thompson again looked over Coster's affairs and found them in good shape. He induced Connecticut interests to lend Coster the $1,000,000.

Businesses Merged

Coster then merged his two businesses and prospered for two years. In 1928 he returned to Thompson with another scheme. He wanted to buy a number of wholesale drugs houses to form a nation-wide chain. The boom days were approaching. Thompson saw that Coster's business had profited $600,000 in the previous year. He recommended Coster highly to Wall Street. The result was, Wall Street raised $20,000,000 for Coster to buy up 17 wholesale houses and incorporate all his interests into McKesson and Robbins, Inc.

Two years later, at the bottom of the depression, Coster asked for help and Wall Street floated $16,000,000 worth of bonds for this growing and prosperous corporation. Coster took Thompson into the firm as treasurer, to handle all finances except for one department—the crude drugs department which was autonomous and under Coster's direct supervision, with all details in charge of George S. Dietrich, who had been associated with Coster since the hair tonic business.

Thompson wondered for years about the crude drugs department, he testified at the attorney general's hearing. It was showing a profit on the books year after year, but was returning no money to the company. All the profits supposedly went back into more supplies, which were stored in Canadian warehouses.

According to all records Thompson could find, the firm of W. W. Smith and company of Liverpool, England, handled the purchases and sales for the crude drugs department, and the firm of Manning and company of Montreal, Quebec, handled the funds, collections, disbursements. The only thing to arouse suspicion was that the Smith company worked on a commission basis, and McKesson-Robbins was paying out about $150,000 a year in commissions to it, hence, despite its apparent profits, the crude drugs department was costing money.

The denouncement came when Thompson asked Dun and Bradstreet to make him a private report on the warehouses and the Smith and Manning companies. Thompson was in effect going over his boss' head in doing this, since he was not supposed to be concerned with the crude drugs branch. Dun and Bradstreet informed Thompson that Smith and Manning were nothing but mailing addresses, the former with only two known employes and the latter operated by one woman secretary, and that there were no warehouses.

The company was at that time preparing to float another $3,000,000 bond issue. Thompson had a showdown with Coster, who was defiant. So Thompson exposed the debacle.

Charged with Coster and Dietrich in the case is George Vernard, of the "Brooklyn office" of W. H. Smith and company.

The full story of what has happened and what is to come of McKesson-Robbins, a corporation with 66 branches in 35 states, employing 700 salesman and serving 55,000 retail drug stores in the United States, remains to be told.

Jews the same treatment as is meted to German Jews.

In practice, American Jews have not been treated on the same basis as German Jews, except as regards three American Jews whose shops were smashed in the anti-Jewish outbreak of November 10. Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels in an interview after the November outbreak said foreign Jews would be exempt from anti-Jewish measurers. As a matter of fact, the reopening of shops by American Jews was regarded as purely an academic question. It was held to be extremely doubtful that any such shop would be able to do a profitable business even if the Nazi authorities protected it.

Money Being Counted

Nazi banking authorities busied themselves today in counting the proceeds from the collection of the first $100,000,000 instalment of a $400,000,000 fine levide on Jews as a penalty for the assassination of Ernst Vom Rath, secretary in the Paris embassy, by a Jewish youth. Some doubt was felt that yesterday's contributions would total $100,000,000, and the Nazi government reserved the right to resort to other means if the four installments did not reach the total of $400,000,000.

The company was deeply enmeshed in legal proceedings — stockholders' suits, a petition for reorganization, S. E. C. investigations, bondholders' protective actions, and under suspension from the stock exchange, and the effect of the $18,000,000 shortage was uncertain. It was agreed, however, that the shortage was enough to wipe out the company's common stock, of which Coster held 10 percent and control.

Informed of his true identity, Coster's associates recalled today that he had always been regarded as something of a man of mystery in the industrial world. Nobody had known him before 1922, but that had been attributed to the possibility that he had risen from obscurity in the boom days and that who he had been and what he had done before that had been inconsequential.

The records showed now that the contrary was true.

Philip Musica was born in New York in 1884, of Italian immigrant parents. They lived at first in poverty on the lower East side. The father, Antonio Musica, was a barber. He saved up enough money to open a small importing shop, dealing in foodstuffs from Italy which founds a ready market among other Italian immigrants here.

As a boy, Philip showed business acumen. He prevailed on his father who was reluctant, to expand their business and concentrate on the Italian cheese market. Their fortunes rose rapidly after Philip began passing bribes among weighers at the customs office to falsify the invoices on their cheese imports.

Son Accepted Blame

When they were caught, Philip made a dramatic gesture in court by shouldering the entire blame. His father consequently was exonerated and Philip was sentenced to prison for a year.

In six months he was out, on a pardon signed by President Taft. He returned to New York and evolved another scheme for his father—the human hair business. Women's styles in those days—1910—ran to high coiffures and false hair was in demand. Good hair, of long lengths, was worth $800 a pound. Philip and his father formed the United States Hair company. They thrived and moved to a large house with an expansive lawn and stables for horses. Philip became a dude and mingled with the opera society. He met financiers and entertained stage celebrities.

In 1913 Philip went to the Bank of Manhattan company, informed the executives that he had 216 cases of the finest human hair, worth $370,000. He wanted to borrow the full amount on bills of lading and bills of exchange on the hair. The bank'lent him only $25,000. A few days later, a clerk noticed that the figures on the bills of lading appeared to have been tampered with. An investigation was made at the Brooklyn pier where the hair was stored. It was of the cheapest variety—worth $250.

Home Empty

Policemen went to the Musica home. The family had evacuated with most of the furnishings. This news startled the American Bankers association which learned at once that the Anglo-South American bank held eight worthless drafts from Musica drawn on foreign firms, and that the banking house of J. and W. Seligman had lent Musica $17,000 on false invoices. Further investigation disclosed that 22 banks had been defrauded of $1,000,000.

Burns agency detectives found the Musica family's trial followed it to New Orleans. Aboard a boat, ready to leave for Honduras, they found them, listed on the manifest as the Martin family.

Louise Musica, Philip's sister, ran from the stateroom and tried to throw a package overboard. It was taken from her and found to contain $18,000 in currency. Other members of the family had $80,000 among them.

Philip had paid up insurance policies for $225,000. Philip seized a gun, shouting he wanted to kill himself. He was restrained.

Philip again pleaded guilty and absolved his father. He spent three years in prison helping authorities straighten out his manipulations. In 1916, three years after his arrest, he was given a suspended sentence.

In the meantime, in 1914, while Philip was in the tombs, a chicken dealer named Barnet Baff had been murdered. Philip Musica entered the case in 1920, when, in some manner, he obtained a job as investigator, or "stool pigeon," for the district attorney's office. Joseph Cohen went on trial for the Baff murder and Musica presented the district attorney's office with an affidavit saying he had heard Cohen and other gangsters plotting the murder in prison. He also got two witnesses for the state, Hyman Berger and George Davis, whom he said he met in jail.

Perjury Rumored

Cohen was sentenced to death but rumors of perjury caused Gov. Alfred E. Smith to commute the sentence to life imprisonment. Musica was indicted for subornation of perjury, charged with having inducted the witnesses to testify falsely against Cohen. He had left the district attorney's employ and was found at work for a lawyer who was defending some of the men involved in the Baff case. There was no record of Musica having served time on the perjury charge, and from that time until today his name was never again in the news.

F. Donald Coster appeared in New York in 1925 seeking a loan to expand his business. It was a hair-tonic firm, Girard and company, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., dealing in standard brands and doing a good business. The records showed that Coster had been its president since 1922. He applied at the banking firm of Bond and Goodwin, and Julian F. Thompson of that company was assigned to investigate his standing.

It looked to Thompson like a good investment. He got Coster additional bank credits.

The following year Coster approached Thompson again. He wanted $1,000,000 to buy McKesson and Robbins Manufacturing company, a drugs firm of almost 100 years good standing. It had been established in 1883 by John McKesson and Daniel C. Robbins. McKesson's grandsons, Irving and Donald McKesson, were then in dispute with other stockholders and it had been decided to split the firm. The McKessons took the chemical manufacturing business and allied lines, and the other stockholders took the medicinal departments and the company name. It was the latter branch in which Coster was interested.

Thompson again looked over Coster's affairs and found them in good shape. He induced Connecticut interests to lend Coster the $1,000,000.

Businesses Merged

Coster then merged his two businesses and prospered for two years. In 1928 he returned to Thompson with another scheme. He wanted to buy a number of wholesale drugs houses to form a nation-wide chain. The boom days were approaching. Thompson saw that Coster's business had profited $600,000 in the previous year. He recommended Coster highly to Wall Street. The result was, Wall Street raised $20,000,000 for Coster to buy up 17 wholesale houses and incorporate all his interests into McKesson and Robbins, Inc.

Two years later, at the bottom of the depression, Coster asked for help and Wall Street floated $16,000,000 worth of bonds for this growing and prosperous corporation. Coster took Thompson into the firm as treasurer, to handle all finances except for one department—the crude drugs department which was autonomous and under Coster's direct supervision, with all details in charge of George S. Dietrich, who had been associated with Coster since the hair tonic business.

Thompson wondered for years about the crude drugs department, he testified at the attorney general's hearing. It was showing a profit on the books year after year, but was returning no money to the company. All the profits supposedly went back into more supplies, which were stored in Canadian warehouses.

According to all records Thompson could find, the firm of W. W. Smith and company of Liverpool, England, handled the purchases and sales for the crude drugs department, and the firm of Manning and company of Montreal, Quebec, handled the funds, collections, disbursements. The only thing to arouse suspicion was that the Smith company worked on a commission basis, and McKesson-Robbins was paying out about $150,000 a year in commissions to it, hence, despite its apparent profits, the crude drugs department was costing money.

The denouncement came when Thompson asked Dun and Bradstreet to make him a private report on the warehouses and the Smith and Manning companies. Thompson was in effect going over his boss' head in doing this, since he was not supposed to be concerned with the crude drugs branch. Dun and Bradstreet informed Thompson that Smith and Manning were nothing but mailing addresses, the former with only two known employes and the latter operated by one woman secretary, and that there were no warehouses.

The company was at that time preparing to float another $3,000,000 bond issue. Thompson had a showdown with Coster, who was defiant. So Thompson exposed the debacle.

Charged with Coster and Dietrich in the case is George Vernard, of the "Brooklyn office" of W. H. Smith and company.

The full story of what has happened and what is to come of McKesson-Robbins, a corporation with 66 branches in 35 states, employing 700 salesman and serving 55,000 retail drug stores in the United States, remains to be told.

Jews the same treatment as is meted to German Jews.

In practice, American Jews have not been treated on the same basis as German Jews, except as regards three American Jews whose shops were smashed in the anti-Jewish outbreak of November 10.

Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels in an interview after the November outbreak said foreign Jews would be exempt from anti-Jewish measurers. As a matter of fact, the reopening of shops by American Jews was regarded as purely an academic question. It was held to be extremely doubtful that any such shop would be able to do a profitable business even if the Nazi authorities protected it.

Money Being Counted

Nazi banking authorities busied themselves today in counting the proceeds from the collection of the first $100,000,000 instalment of a $400,000,000 fine levide on Jews as a penalty for the assassination of Ernst Vom Rath, secretary in the Paris embassy, by a Jewish youth. Some doubt was felt that yesterday's contributions would total $100,000,000, and the Nazi government reserved the right to resort to other means if the four installments did not reach the total of $400,000,000.

FUND RECEIVED FOR OPERATION OF MEN'S WORK

Rug Weaving, Shoe Repair, Other Jobs Provided For Disabled Reliefers

LOCATION BEING SOUGHT

Deed, Mortgage Transcribing Delayed; $13,324 Not Yet On Hand

Funds for the operation of a W. P. A. project to provide work for men physically unable to work on construction projects and women are available but so far a location for the work has not been obtained.

Mrs. Beulah Madison, N. Scioto street, area supervisor of women's and professional projects, said she hoped to have arrangements worked out in the near future for a location and operation of the project.

Federal allotment for the project was $19,411. The project includes rug weaving, shoe repair, rejuvenation of old clothing, making stuffed toys, etc.

Mrs. Madison said the toy branch of the project came too late for the Christmas season. Some stuffed toys have been made during the last week by women employed on the sewing project on E. Main street. Forty-five women are employed on the sewing project. Probably the first branch of the project to be started will be shoe repairing.

To date the funds have not been released for the project for transcribing deed and mortgages indices and Probate court records in the county. The federal allocation on this project was $13,324.

Both projects are sponsored by the commissioners.

CHIEFS OF DRY FORCES TO MAP LIQUOR BATTLE

COLUMBUS, Dec. 16—(UP)—Commanders of the Anti-Saloon League's dry legions were planning new strategy in their war on alcohol at sessions today in Columbus—where exactly a quarter of a century ago they organized to secure national prohibition.

Outstanding dry leaders, attending the 30th national convention of the league, were unanimous in their opinions that the country is heading rapidly toward a new form of prohibition.

In interviews with the United Press, they were uncertain as to when dry agitaton will reach its climax in favor of national prohibition, or what form it will take.

The next important step in solving the liquor problem, according to Andrew Wilson of Washington, D. C., vice president of the league, will be "closer organization of anti-liquor forces under a responsible leadership to produce an enlightened public opinion."

This venerable official of the league, one of the few men alive who helped to form the dry organization in the nineties, and who helped to write the language of the 18th amendment, said:

"It is inevitable that we shall get rid of intoxicants, but it must be done with a better plan than we have had before."

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND

Presenting a warm and vibrant love story into which are woven the romance, laughter and restless desires of youth, Universal's sweeping emotional drama, "Youth Take a Fling", starts its local run Sunday at the Grand Theatre.

Joel McCrea is starred as the Kansas farm boy who seeks adventure by going to sea, and Andrea Leeds is co-starred as the romantic salesgirl in the wedding gown department of a big store, who lives only for the day she herself will be a bride.

The picture was produce by Joe Pasternak, who has made all of Deanna Durbin's screen hits. The talented cast includes such popular artists as Frank Jenks and Dorothea Kent, who give romantic advice to Joel and Andrea; Virginia Grey as the dashing department store flirt; Isabel Jeans, noted English actress, as the muchly-married Mrs. Merrivale, and Grant Mitchell, Brandon Tynan, Oscar O'Shea and Catherine Proctor.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Louise Brooks, playing the role of Beth Hoyt in the republic Three Mesquiteer picture, "Overland Stage Raiders," which opens tonight on a double feature program at the Cliftona Theatre, received the thrill of her life during production of the film.

This was Miss Brooks' first western picture. While she had done some riding in the past, she had never made a hobby of it, and she needed some training for her part in the picture. And—she had not one coach, but three—to teach her the art of riding in western fashion. The Three Mesquiteers—Ray Corrigan, John Wayne, and Max Terhune — combined to make a good rider out of her.

That they succeeded can be seen by catching "Overland Stage Raiders" while it is still showing. Critics are saying that it is the best of the popular series to date.

An excellent supporting cast is composed of Anthony Marsh, Bud Osborne, Gordon Hart, Roy James, Charles Whitaker, Archie Hall, George Sherwood, and many others.

AT THE CIRCLE

Check your dignity at the door when you go in to see "Cowboy from Brooklyn" which opened yesterday at the Circle. Comedies don't come any funnier than this musical saga of a cowboy who never rides the range because he's scared to death of horses.

With the exception of a few sentimental interludes and some musical moments every minute of this production, which feature Pat O'Brien, Dick Powell and Priscilla Lane, has at least fifty-nine secands of hilarious comedy, with the result that the opening day audience roared with laughter almost continuously from the first scene to the last.

It is a fast-moving farce, with songs introduced occasionally but always as a logical step in the plot, which revolves about the amusing misadventures of a singer. Some of the songs are old cowboy ballads, but there are also five new tunes, every one of which gives definite promise of being a big hit. The reviewer liked particularly the songs entitled "Ride. Tenderfoot, Ride" and "I'll Dream Tonight."

FUND RECEIVED FOR OPERATION OF MEN'S WORK

Rug Weaving, Shoe Repair, Other Jobs Provided For Disabled Reliefers

LOCATION BEING SOUGHT

Deed, Mortgage Transcribing Delayed; $13,324 Not Yet On Hand

Funds for the operation of a W. P. A. project to provide work for men physically unable to work on construction projects and women are available but so far a location for the work has not been obtained.

Mrs. Beulah Madison, N. Scioto street, area supervisor of women's and professional projects, said she hoped to have arrangements worked out in the near future for a location and operation of the project.

Federal allotment for the project was $19,411. The project includes rug weaving, shoe repair, rejuvenation of old clothing, making stuffed toys, etc.

Mrs. Madison said the toy branch of the project came too late for the Christmas season. Some stuffed toys have been made during the last week by women employed on the sewing project on E. Main street. Forty-five women are employed on the sewing project. Probably the first branch of the project to be started will be shoe repairing.

To date the funds have not been released for the project for transcribing deed and mortgages indices and Probate court records in the county. The federal allocation on this project was $13,324.

Both projects are sponsored by the commissioners.

CHIEFS OF DRY FORCES TO MAP LIQUOR BATTLE

COLUMBUS, Dec. 16—(UP)—Commanders of the Anti-Saloon League's dry legions were planning new strategy in their war on alcohol at sessions today in Columbus—where exactly a quarter of a century ago they organized to secure national prohibition.

Outstanding dry leaders, attending the 30th national convention of the league, were unanimous in their opinions that the country is heading rapidly toward a new form of prohibition.

In interviews with the United Press, they were uncertain as to when dry agitaton will reach its climax in favor of national prohibition, or what form it will take.

The next important step in solving the liquor problem, according to Andrew Wilson of Washington, D. C., vice president of the league, will be "closer organization of anti-liquor forces under a responsible leadership to produce an enlightened public opinion."

This venerable official of the league, one of the few men alive who helped to form the dry organization in the nineties, and who helped to write the language of the 18th amendment, said:

"It is inevitable that we shall get rid of intoxicants, but it must be done with a better plan than we have had before."

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND

Presenting a warm and vibrant love story into which are woven the romance, laughter and restless desires of youth, Universal's sweeping emotional drama, "Youth Take a Fling", starts its local run Sunday at the Grand Theatre.

Joel McCrea is starred as the Kansas farm boy who seeks adventure by going to sea, and Andrea Leeds is co-starred as the romantic salesgirl in the wedding gown department of a big store, who lives only for the day she herself will be a bride.

The picture was produce by Joe Pasternak, who has made all of Deanna Durbin's screen hits. The talented cast includes such popular artists as Frank Jenks and Dorothea Kent, who give romantic advice to Joel and Andrea; Virginia Grey as the dashing department store flirt; Isabel Jeans, noted English actress, as the muchly-married Mrs. Merrivale, and Grant Mitchell, Brandon Tynan, Oscar O'Shea and Catherine Proctor.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Louise Brooks, playing the role of Beth Hoyt in the republic Three Mesquiteer picture, "Overland Stage Raiders," which opens tonight on a double feature program at the Cliftona Theatre, received the thrill of her life during production of the film.

This was Miss Brooks' first western picture. While she had done some riding in the past, she had never made a hobby of it, and she needed some training for her part in the picture. And—she had not one coach, but three—to teach her the art of riding in western fashion. The Three Mesquiteers—Ray Corrigan, John Wayne, and Max Terhune — combined to make a good rider out of her.

That they succeeded can be seen by catching "Overland Stage Raiders" while it is still showing. Critics are saying that it is the best of the popular series to date.

An excellent supporting cast is composed of Anthony Marsh, Bud Osborne, Gordon Hart, Roy James, Charles Whitaker, Archie Hall, George Sherwood, and many others.

AT THE CIRCLE

Check your dignity at the door when you go in to see "Cowboy from Brooklyn" which opened yesterday at the Circle. Comedies don't come any funnier than this musical saga of a cowboy who never rides the range because he's scared to death of horses.

With the exception of a few sentimental interludes and some musical moments every minute of this production, which feature Pat O'Brien, Dick Powell and Priscilla Lane, has at least fifty-nine secands of hilarious comedy, with the result that the opening day audience roared with laughter almost continuously from the first scene to the last.

It is a fast-moving farce, with songs introduced occasionally but always as a logical step in the plot, which revolves about the amusing misadventures of a singer. Some of the songs are old cowboy ballads, but there are also five new tunes, every one of which gives definite promise of being a big hit. The reviewer liked particularly the songs entitled "Ride. Tenderfoot, Ride" and "I'll Dream Tonight."

OPEN LETTERS

TO F. K. BLAIR

COUNTY AGENT: The suggestion for a farm program coordinating committee that you make in your annual report to the Farm Bureau is one worth much consideration. Pickaway county has used many thousands of dollars of government money in the last several years, sent here for compliance with various crop programs. A committee comprised of outstanding, successful farmers to coordinate all programs of the government, state and county for the best interests of our farmers should prove of much benefit to all concerned. I hope that the suggestion receives wholehearted support from persons who are able to put it over.

CIRCUITEER.

TO COUNTY MUSICIANS

STUDENTS.: The 350-odd persons who heard your annual musical program, conducted in the Ashville high school, were unanimous in their declarations that the music was the best ever offered. Much careful coaching was necessary to make the youthful singers and orchestra members handle their work as they did. Credit is due the school administrators, instructors and pupils for the success of the event, which now rates as one of the outstanding annual functions undertaken by the county school organization.

CIRCUITEER.

TO STORE PATRONS

FOLK: Are you asking Circleville merchants for Bucks when you make purchases? Remember, with these Bucks you will be able to "buy" merchandise at the auction to be held in Memorial Hall on Dec. 23. Valuable merchandise donated by merchants participating in the Buck Passing campaign will be auctioned.

CIRCUITEER.

TO JAMES I. SMITH, JR.

DEAR CANNER: You have put Circleville and Pickaway county in the limelight again by your election as president of the Ohio Canners' association. You deserve congratulations of all as a result of your elevation to the highest position attainable in the Ohio organization. The fact that your father before you held the same position makes the honor a more impressive one. You may take your place beside Howard Orr, Ed Wallace, Frank Lynch, Clark Will and Walter Marion, who, at different times have headed canners, bakers, bottlers, bankers and gardeners organizations of the state and nation. You should take an active part in conduct of the business of the association, doing all you can to help the condition of the canner, the person who buys his products and the farmer, the one who provides the produce that makes the canning industry one of our county's finest.

CIRCUITEER.

TO SPORTSMEN

ANGLERS: Why put fish in the old canal waters? Past experiences should have taught sportsmen that it is useless to stock the canal. Flood waters on several occasions have torn out the canal banks taking the "planted" fish into the Scioto river. There are few fishermen in this territory who will catch or eat fish taken from the Scioto river. I would suggest that fish received from the state hatcheries be placed in some of the better streams of the county where there is a chance that they might provide sport for anglers.

CIRCUITEER.

TO CHRISTMAS SHOPPERS

FRIENDS: Postal employes have issued their annual appeal to shoppers to mail Christmas packages as early as possible. It is a physical impossibility for them to handle the great mass of mail matter efficiently and promptly within a few days. Parcels should be mailed a week to 10 days before Christmas, depending on the distance they are to be sent. Early mailing not only assures delivery of packages before Christmas day, but it makes it possible for postal employes to spend the Christmas holiday with their families. Be sure your packages are wrapped with strong paper and heavy twine.

CIRCUITEER.

TO GAME SEEKERS

NIMRODS: Now that the hunting season is about to close, and you have reaped their reward, the least you can do in repayment is to provide food and cover for the seed stock which remains, especially during the bad weather when lowered vitality and cold nights take a heavy toll of wildlife. Under the circumstances, I urge you at this time to place food in likely spots, preferably where birds and animals may be protected from predators while they are feeding. Farmer organizations, Future Farmers of America, 4-H Clubs and similar organizations are all urged to take a hand in these constructive measures, which, if followed through in a systematic manner, will provide this district with as much or more wildlife as it possessed prior to this year's hunting season. City dwellers can do their part for the pleasure and benefit which song and insectivorous birds give them, by putting their old bread crusts and bits of suet where the birds can get them. Try feeding the birds in your own back yards and see how much pleasure you derive from watching their antics, and at the same time help preserve them from the rigors of Winter. A bird or animal saved this Winter will mean more wildlife in the coming season.

DIET AND HEALTH

Muscles Subject To Few Diseases

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE MUSCLES make up the bulk (not most of the weight), however) and the form and contour of the body. The "living skeleton" whose muscles have all wasted hardly resembles a human being at all.

As machines, muscles are quite remarkable contraptions. They obey, with some exceptions, the laws of the stretching of an elastic body, such as a wire or a rubber hand. All the pulleys, fulcrums and jackscrews ever invented by man were modeled on the action of muscles on bones.

As to efficiency, any machine is measured on the basis of the ratio of the energy put out in mechanical form, divided by the total energy expended in the process. In the muscle, the energy which cannot appear as muscular work is degraded to heat and can be measured as such. The equation is:

$$\text{Efficiency} = \frac{\text{Work}}{\text{Work} + \text{heat}}.$$

On this basis our muscles are about 30 per cent efficient. Few machines made by man show such efficiency. A steam engine is about 10 per cent efficient. It loses 20 per cent more of the energy in its fuel than the muscle.

Occupational Diseases

Fortunately, muscles are subject to few diseases. In a few rare cases, the muscles atrophy—this is the familiar living skeleton — but most muscular troubles are occupational diseases, confined to baseball and football players. I mean sprains, tears, "Charley horse", etc.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

For most people a great deal of the feeling of well being of the body depends on keeping the muscles fit by exercise. I have expressed myself on the subject of exercise many times with the result (not uncommon with my expressions) that I have been misunderstood. People say to me as I am taking my constitutional or playing golf, "Why! I thought you didn't believe in exercise."

All I said was that I did not subscribe to all the hooey of the "big muscle boys", that big muscles mean good health, or that exercise will make you live longer or keep you from catching cold.

Undoubtedly it makes you feel better and for most people thereby adds to the efficiency of their routine. I say "for most people" because for some—the thin asthenics—it is pure poison.

Set of Exercises

For the desk worker who cannot get out at the favorable hours these winter days, I saw the account of a set of exercises to take at the desk or in the wash room every hour or two:

1. Squeeze your eyelids together as tightly as you can, and blink them rapidly 20 times, with fingers pressed to temples. You will lose those notebook face cramps.
2. Put your arms up to the ceiling and stretch, stretch, stretch.
3. Lean over and pick up an envelope from the desk with your teeth. It's good for your neck.
4. Sit down or lie down (in the wash room) and put your legs up even with your head, massaging your calves as you do so.
5. Take your shoes off and squirm all over.

For those more fortunately placed and under 40, tennis and handball are good. For those over 50 or any age, walking rapidly is superb.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

C. R. M.: "Am writing to ask your opinion of the X-ray method of removing tonsils."

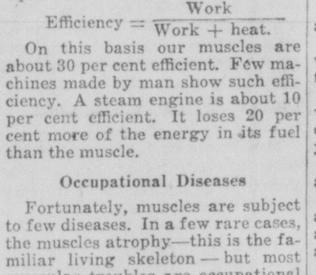

Answer: Opinions differ as to this. My personal advice would be that since surgical removal is so safe and effective, it should be the method of choice.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet", "Indigestion and Constipation", "Reducing and Gaining", "Infant Feeding", "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes", "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

CONTRACT BRIDGE

LISTEN AND LEARN

IF ONE OF YOUR opponents bids and rebids a particular suit, and his partner then assists it, how many cards have they in the suit? Right — at least eight or nine. If you have four cards of the suit, how many can your partner hold? Right—either one or none. When you listen to such bidding conversation you may learn many things, if you also think—including the best defense against the eventual contract.

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable)

North began the auction on this deal with a bid of 1-Diamond, South called 2-Clubs, North 3-Diamonds, South 3-Spades, North 4-Clubs, South 4-Diamonds and North 5-Clubs.

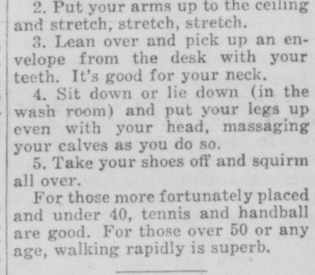

Before leading, West reviewed the bidding and figured with North's diamond bid, his jump in the suit and South's assist, he might find his partner void, so he led the diamond J, which East ruffed.

East had no other return but a heart, as spades had been bid by South. He made the lucky return of a heart, which West won, giving him a chance to allow East to ruff another diamond.

With any other lead the hand is a laydown, as only one club and one heart need be lost.

The cost of the New York Worlds Fair in 1939 is put at $125,000,000. Construction is said to be ahead of schedule.

World At A Glance

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

Partisanly speaking, the 20th congressional district of New York is a queer district for fair. It's one of those Manhattan areas, and, judging from the names of the last three representatives it has sent to Washington, I would surmise that it has a sizable Italian population—Fiorello H. LaGuardia, James J. Lanzetta and Vito Marcantonio. They have been pretty good representatives, too. The point is: What an extraordinary mixture of politics! New York's present Mayor LaGuardia was the first of the series. Originally he was elected as a Republican. He was a highly irregular one. Nevertheless, he served under a G.O.P. label for two or three terms. Then it occurred to him to run as a Socialist. That suited the 20th district all right. He won in a walk and served a Socialistic term. After that he turned Republican again, and won. In due course he decided that he wanted the New York mayoralty, so he campaigned for it as a Fusionist—and won. Today he's an American Labor Partyite.

Anyhow, his retirement from Congress for the mayoralty left a Congressional vacancy. Marcantonio grabbed it, as a Republican. He was another G.O.P. unmanageability. Really he was a very advanced liberal independent. Still, he classed Republicanly.

BEATEN TWO YEARS AGO

Two years ago, however, he was beaten by Lanzetta, a Democrat.

But this year he tried again and this time he was victorious. It generally was assumed that he did so as a Republican. Clerk South Trimble of the House of Representatives was jotting him down accordingly for the next Congressional Directory. At that juncture he received a message from Marcantonio to the effect that he ISN'T a Republican — he's an American Labor Partyite.

It makes Clerk Trimble's head swim. It makes all politicians' heads swim.

Here's a district which, in a few short years, has been Republican, Socialist, Republican again, once more Republican, Democratic, now American Labor Partyite.

Five changes in that brief period!

It's been a radical district, though, all the while.

Oh, it isn't a characteristic district. It's a freak. All the same it attracts attention. Not but that other districts flop occasionally, but the 20th New York's has established a record for flopping so fast and so far.

Incidentally, the floppers are pretty prominent men—LaGuardia VERY prominent; Marcantonio middling so; Lanzetta no obscurity.

Parenthetically, Lanzetta can't be said to have flopped. He's been a so-called Democrat all along. His district flopped on HIM. But LaGuardia has flopped four or five times, and Marcantonio has flopped at least once.

Neither is it quite fair to say that LaGuardia and Marcantonio are actual floppers. They have their own politico-economic philosophy. As practical politicians, they know they need to be elected to accomplish their ends; so they ally themselves, from election to election, with whichever group seems momentarily, to suit their purposes. They don't care a hoot for party versus party; they're maneuvering.

NO GREAT DIFFERENCE

Marcantonio's flop hasn't amounted to much.

The Republicans thought they gained eighty seats in the House of Representatives—seventy-one Democrats, four Farmer-Laborites and five Progressives. But they didn't realize that they'd lost Marcantonio.

That changes the line-up.

The vote's a mere trifle, but one ballot signifies on a near-tie.

Marcantonio will be a one-party voter in the next House of Representatives. The Farmer-Laborites will be one. The Progressives will be two. Republicans, 169. Democrats, 262.

But the Democrats will be split. The Republicans also, somewhat. The Progressives, the Farmer-Laborite and Marcantonio may register decisively, if they stick together. A balance of power is a mighty effective thing. Usually it doesn't weigh and counterweigh so accurately, but it may this time.

I'm speaking of 1940.

CHAPTER 48

"BOB TOWNE, you have simply got to stop proposing to me every time we meet. I am very happy about the Columbian award. Happy for you. I think you deserve every dollar of it. But that has nothing to do with you and me."

Sara Sue wasn't going to let Bob get into a balmy mood, if she could help it. Men are much more difficult to handle then, if you are by nature kind.

"Aw, but listen, Sara Sue—didn't you hear what Sanders just said? He said—he said it was all right! He congratulated me. You MUST have told him something, didn't you? Come on, this is no time for teasing!"

She sighed heavily.

"I'm not teasing."

"You are."

"I'm not, I tell you. I—I don't want to be flip about it, Bob, you know that. I wouldn't hurt anybody's feelings for the world. But I did not say I would marry you."

"Well, you can say it now, can't you? Grea-a-at glory, Sara Sue, I'm crazy about you! You know I am."

"I ought to, by now." She said it resignedly, looking beyond him.

"Then let's get married. Hunh? . . . Listen, kid—" Bob's voice and manner changed abruptly then. He dropped almost to a whisper, and pleaded as earnestly as he knew how.

Sara Sue knew that he was in earnest, too. She could tell. Most of the time Bob Towne was blustery, noisy, peppery. But Sara Sue was wise enough to know that such an outward manner often covers a fine sensitivity. She had long ago known that it did in Bob Towne.

His softer urging, therefore, stirred and hurt her more than his bluster. She had just forced herself out of one emotional experience, had just stopped crying because she had to turn T. J. Sanders down. It may be flattering, she was reflecting, but it is also nerve rending to have two young men offer you their hearts and souls in the same half hour. Especially if each is a go-getter type, full of energy, strong. She just could not maintain her pose of crusty bantering; the tears came back into her eyes.

And the tears—surprisingly—did the trick.

Big Bob Towne, no spiritual fool even if he was a football man, was pleading as earnestly as he knew how— "and I'll work for you and slave for you, honey; honest I will. I'll be anything you want me to be. I'll have this money—I'm going to ask T. J. to stand up with us, should I?—and it'll be enough to start us out. If you'd rather I finish school, I will; but honey, I wish you would marry me at once and — aw-w-w-w honey! . . . S-Sara Sue! . . . You're—crying!"

He had concluded in a bare whisper. He looked into her eyes for several seconds. She was silent, but he had his final answer.

Slowly he took a handkerchief and blotted her tears. He pleaded no more, spoke no more at all; in fact, never in all his life thereafter did Bob Towne mention this moment to Sara Sue again, never did he again mention, flippantly or otherwise, that he had loved her, wanted her, yearned for her as devotedly as he knew how.

They had been sitting together, even as she and T. J. had been sitting together a few minutes ago. Bob put his hand under her elbow, helped her to rise. Then he patted her shoulder ever so gently. That was all. They started walking toward the ballroom. A hullabaloo there assailed them.

When a dance floor has more than 800 people on it, in all the varying stages of hilarity and motion and happiness and noise, one more man shouting frantically is not likely to be understood on the opposite side of the room. Bob and Sara Sue paid little attention at first. But then the orchestra stopped, heads began to turn, and words began to be clear. The shouting man was moving, and waving a hand.

"SARA SUE . . . WAIT, I TELL YOU! . . . WAIT! . . . I LOVE YOU MYSELF! AND I . . ."

The utterly amazing proclamation startled everyone into silent attention.

Sara Sue began to hear, to understand, to recognize him. "It's Thornton," she murmured, incredulous. "It's Thornton Holgate! . . . What in the world—?"

The shouting man was moving and waving his hands.

The young professor was plowing through people much as he had plowed through salt waves off Galveston; pushing and pulling and swimming, and shouting instructions the while. Wild, frantic instructions. Nobody laughed, yet; nobody quite understood. Was this another gag? Another floor show act? Whatever—?

"Oh, Sara Sue, am I too late? Are you—?"

"Why, Thornton, what in the world is it? Do you realize what you are doing? And saying?" Sara Sue almost shouted herself now. Everyone strained to listen.

"Oh, my darling, I do! I am saying that I love you and want to marry you." He paused momentarily, to swallow and catch his breath. "Is it true that someone—Towne—was proposing to you? Have you accepted him? Is there no hope? Oh, I have been so blind, Sara Sue! So incredibly blind, and stupid. Can you forgive me? Can you give me time to prove my affection? To show—"

He held out a hand in supplication.

His astounded audience, including Sara Sue herself, was enthralled by his manner. No one laughed. No one smiled. Here was drama, abject, gripping drama, and everybody seemed to sense it instantly. Some may have thought it an act, but certainly they wanted to see it through. A somewhat disheveled young man, a young Rice professor whom most of them knew because of recent publicity, was openly and earnestly proposing marriage to a beautiful girl. And he seemed oblivious of the crowd around them. Oblivious of everything in God's world save The Girl who stood there.

"I was wrong, darling, wrong! I asked your help, but it was you I wanted, not she. I knew it weeks ago, and my foolish pride held me back. I was thinking, hoping, some way would be made clear for me to make love to you, yourself. You, Sara Sue! Not her. Not her, I tell you! I knew the minute I first saw you that it was you, that night we talked, while it rained. But I—you—you were an ideal, and I—I—oh, what a fool I have been!"

"Why, Thornton! . . . Why Thornton!"

She could not speak coherently. She reached tremulously as if to touch him, then withdrew her hand and put it to her mouth.

"Why, Thornton!"

"I have only now learned that you may be engaged. I came, hastening, running. I am sorry if I—Oh, I must have upset things here!" He glanced for the first time at the amazed listeners around them. "But I do not care. This transcends conventions, my dear. It does! I love you. I care not who knows, or hears. If it is not too late—no matter, I love you anyway. I always have. I always shall!"

"For God's sake!" some voice in the crowd rumbled.

And that broke the tension. A veritable explosion of words, exclamations, laughs, everything, came then.

"Why, T-T-Thornton!" Her voice was breaking now, and her dainty chin was trembling. She was gazing intently into his eyes, her own misty and deep and calm. "T-Thornton! Yes, Thornton!"

The noise subsided, and people moved back away from them, there almost in the middle of the floor. She was in his arms—he was still talking, pouring out his very soul—and she was looking up, nodding.

They were still there a full minute later, and a hush almost sublime had settled again over the staring crowd. Here and there was excited murmuring and whispering. And the appreciative orchestra leader, accustomed perhaps to unexpected drama, raised his baton, spoke a word or two; music suffused them, muted, tuneful music. Could it have been a wedding song? Lohengrin? Still oblivious, Sara Sue and Thornton began to walk away; he was still talking, but slowly, softly now. He had an arm around her; he held a hand. They moved down the University club stairs.

The great International ball came to an end about an hour later.

"Ho hum and hi-de-ho" yawned Bob Towne, when he met T. J. Sanders at the hat checking counter.

"Yep," said T. J., not smiling. "Well, I'll be seeing you."

They were almost the last ones to depart. They were tired, and looked it.

"Guess I'll leave these last two coats," Freshman Gurley said. "They belong to Sara Sue and Dr. Holgate. They didn't call for them. Say, Bob, I thought the upperclassmen were going to mix up the checks, or something?"

"Phooey, slime. Go on home. Your wife is already asleep around there in an easy chair. I ought to beat you for neglecting her. Maybe I will."

OPEN LETTERS

TO F. K. BLAIR

COUNTY AGENT: The suggestion for a farm program coordinating committee that you make in your annual report to the Farm Bureau is one worth much consideration. Pickaway county has used many thousands of dollars of government money in the last several years, sent here for compliance with various crop programs. A committee comprised of outstanding, successful farmers to coordinate all programs of the government, state and county for the best interests of our farmers should prove of much benefit to all concerned. I hope that the suggestion receives wholehearted support from persons who are able to put it over.

CIRCUITEER.

TO COUNTY MUSICIANS

STUDENTS.: The 350-odd persons who heard your annual musical program, conducted in the Ashville high school, were unanimous in their declarations that the music was the best ever offered. Much careful coaching was necessary to make the youthful singers and orchestra members handle their work as they did. Credit is due the school administrators, instructors and pupils for the success of the event, which now rates as one of the outstanding annual functions undertaken by the county school organization.

CIRCUITEER.

TO STORE PATRONS

FOLK: Are you asking Circleville merchants for Bucks when you make purchases? Remember, with these Bucks you will be able to "buy" merchandise at the auction to be held in Memorial Hall on Dec. 23. Valuable merchandise donated by merchants participating in the Buck Passing campaign will be auctioned.

CIRCUITEER.

TO JAMES I. SMITH, JR.

DEAR CANNER: You have put Circleville and Pickaway county in the limelight again by your election as president of the Ohio Canners' association. You deserve congratulations of all as a result of your elevation to the highest position attainable in the Ohio organization. The fact that your father before you held the same position makes the honor a more impressive one. You may take your place beside Howard Orr, Ed Wallace, Frank Lynch, Clark Will and Walter Marion, who, at different times have headed canners, bakers, bottlers, bankers and gardeners organizations of the state and nation. You should take an active part in conduct of the business of the association, doing all you can to help the condition of the canner, the person who buys his products and the farmer, the one who provides the produce that makes the canning industry one of our county's finest.

CIRCUITEER.

TO SPORTSMEN

ANGLERS: Why put fish in the old canal waters? Past experiences should have taught sportsmen that it is useless to stock the canal. Flood waters on several occasions have torn out the canal banks taking the "planted" fish into the Scioto river. There are few fishermen in this territory who will catch or eat fish taken from the Scioto river. I would suggest that fish received from the state hatcheries be placed in some of the better streams of the county where there is a chance that they might provide sport for anglers.

CIRCUITEER.

TO CHRISTMAS SHOPPERS

FRIENDS: Postal employes have issued their annual appeal to shoppers to mail Christmas packages as early as possible. It is a physical impossibility for them to handle the great mass of mail matter efficiently and promptly within a few days. Parcels should be mailed a week to 10 days before Christmas, depending on the distance they are to be sent. Early mailing not only assures delivery of packages before Christmas day, but it makes it possible for postal employes to spend the Christmas holiday with their families. Be sure your packages are wrapped with strong paper and heavy twine.

CIRCUITEER.

TO GAME SEEKERS

NIMRODS: Now that the hunting season is about to close, and you have reaped their reward, the least you can do in repayment is to provide food and cover for the seed stock which remains, especially during the bad weather when lowered vitality and cold nights take a heavy toll of wildlife. Under the circumstances, I urge you at this time to place food in likely spots, preferably where birds and animals may be protected from predators while they are feeding. Farmer organizations, Future Farmers of America, 4-H Clubs and similar organizations are all urged to take a hand in these constructive measures, which, if followed through in a systematic manner, will provide this district with as much or more wildlife as it possessed prior to this year's hunting season. City dwellers can do their part for the pleasure and benefit which song and insectivorous birds give them, by putting their old bread crusts and bits of suet where the birds can get them. Try feeding the birds in your own back yards and see how much pleasure you derive from watching their antics, and at the same time help preserve them from the rigors of Winter. A bird or animal saved this Winter will mean more wildlife in the coming season.

DIET AND HEALTH

Muscles Subject To Few Diseases

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE MUSCLES make up the bulk (not most of the weight), however) and the form and contour of the body. The "living skeleton" whose muscles have all wasted hardly resembles a human being at all.

As machines, muscles are quite remarkable contraptions. They obey, with some exceptions, the laws of the stretching of an elastic body, such as a wire or a rubber hand. All the pulleys, fulcrums and jackscrews ever invented by man were modeled on the action of muscles on bones.

As to efficiency, any machine is measured on the basis of the ratio of the energy put out in mechanical form, divided by the total energy expended in the process. In the muscle, the energy which cannot appear as muscular work is degraded to heat and can be measured as such. The equation is:

$$\text{Efficiency} = \frac{\text{Work}}{\text{Work} + \text{heat}}$$

On this basis our muscles are about 30 per cent efficient. Few machines made by man show such efficiency. A steam engine is about 10 per cent efficient. It loses 20 per cent more of the energy in its fuel than the muscle.

Occupational Diseases

Fortunately, muscles are subject to few diseases. In a few rare cases, the muscles atrophy—this is the familiar living skeleton — but most muscular troubles are occupational diseases, confined to baseball and football players. I mean sprains, tears, "Charley horse", etc.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

For most people a great deal of the feeling of well being of the body depends on keeping the muscles fit by exercise. I have expressed myself on the subject of exercise many times with the result (not uncommon with my expressions) that I have been misunderstood. People say to me as I am taking my constitutional or playing golf, "Why! I thought you didn't believe in exercise."

All I said was that I did not subscribe to all the hooey of the "big muscle boys", that big muscles mean good health, or that exercise will make you live longer or keep you from catching cold.

Undoubtedly it makes you feel better and for most people thereby adds to the efficiency of their routine. I say "for most people" because for some—the thin asthenics—it is pure poison.

Set of Exercises

For the desk worker who cannot get out at the favorable hours these winter days, I saw the account of a set of exercises to take at the desk or in the wash room every hour or two:

1. Squeeze your eyelids together as tightly as you can, and blink them rapidly 20 times, with fingers pressed to temples. You will lose those notebook face cramps.
2. Put your arms up to the ceiling and stretch, stretch, stretch.
3. Lean over and pick up an envelope from the desk with your teeth. It's good for your neck.
4. Sit down or lie down (in the wash room) and put your legs up even with your head, massaging your calves as you do so.
5. Take your shoes off and squirm all over.

For those more fortunately placed and under 40, tennis and handball are good. For those over 50 or any age, walking rapidly is superb.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

C. R. M.: "Am writing to ask your opinion of the X-ray method of removing tonsils."

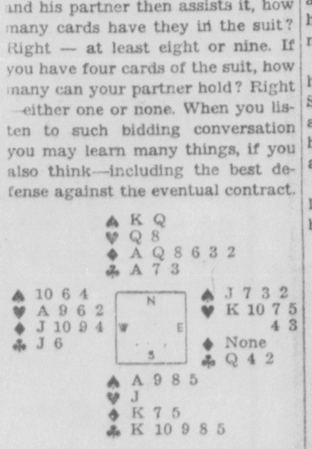

Answer: Opinions differ as to this. My personal advice would be that since surgical removal is so safe and effective, it should be the method of choice.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. CONTRACT BRIDGE

LISTEN AND LEARN

IF ONE OF YOUR opponents bids and rebids a particular suit, and his partner then assists it, how many cards have they in the suit? Right — at least eight or nine. If you have four cards of the suit, how many can your partner hold? Right—either one or none. When you listen to such bidding conversation you may learn many things, if you also think—including the best defense against the eventual contract.

North began the auction on this deal with a bid of 1-Diamond, South called 2-Clubs, North 3-Diamonds, South 3-Spades, North 4-Clubs, South 4-Diamonds and North 5-Clubs.

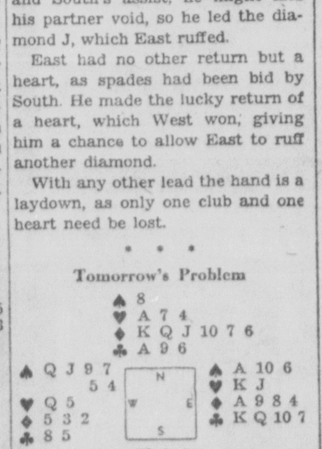

Before leading, West reviewed the bidding and figured with North's diamond bid, his jump in the suit and South's assist, he might find his partner void, so he led the diamond J, which East ruffed.

East had no other return but a heart, as spades had been bid by South. He made the lucky return of a heart, which West won, giving him a chance to allow East to ruff another diamond.

With any other lead the hand is a laydown, as only one club and one heart need be lost.

The cost of the New York Worlds Fair in 1939 is put at $125,000,000. Construction is said to be ahead of schedule.

World At A Glance

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

Partisanly speaking, the 20th congressional district of New York is a queer district for fair. It's one of those Manhattan areas, and, judging from the names of the last three representatives it has sent to Washington, I would surmise that it has a sizable Italian population—Fiorello H. LaGuardia, James J. Lanzetta and Vito Marcantonio. They have been pretty good representatives, too. The point is: What an extraordinary mixture of politics! New York's present Mayor LaGuardia was the first of the series. Originally he was elected as a Republican. He was a highly irregular one. Nevertheless, he served under a G.O.P. label for two or three terms. Then it occurred to him to run as a Socialist. That suited the 20th district all right. He won in a walk and served a Socialistic term. After that he turned Republican again, and won. In due course he decided that he wanted the New York mayoralty, so he campaigned for it as a Fusionist—and won. Today he's an American Labor Partyite.

Anyhow, his retirement from Congress for the mayoralty left a Congressional vacancy. Marcantonio grabbed it, as a Republican. He was another G.O.P. unmanageability. Really he was a very advanced liberal independent. Still, he classed Republicanly.

BEATEN TWO YEARS AGO

Two years ago, however, he was beaten by Lanzetta, a Democrat.

But this year he tried again and this time he was victorious. It generally was assumed that he did so as a Republican. Clerk South Trimble of the House of Representatives was jotting him down accordingly for the next Congressional Directory. At that juncture he received a message from Marcantonio to the effect that he ISN'T a Republican — he's an American Labor Partyite.

It makes Clerk Trimble's head swim. It makes all politicians' heads swim.

Here's a district which, in a few short years, has been Republican, Socialist, Republican again, once more Republican, Democratic, now American Labor Partyite.

Five changes in that brief period!

It's been a radical district, though, all the while.

Oh, it isn't a characteristic district. It's a freak. All the same it attracts attention. Not but that other districts flop occasionally, but the 20th New York's has established a record for flopping so fast and so far.

Incidentally, the floppers are pretty prominent men—LaGuardia VERY prominent; Marcantonio middling so; Lanzetta no obscurity.

Parenthetically, Lanzetta can't be said to have flopped. He's been a so-called Democrat all along. His district flopped on HIM. But LaGuardia has flopped four or five times, and Marcantonio has flopped at least once.

Neither is it quite fair to say that LaGuardia and Marcantonio are actual floppers. They have their own politico-economic philosophy. As practical politicians, they know they need to be elected to accomplish their ends; so they ally themselves, from election to election, with whichever group seems momentarily, to suit their purposes. They don't care a hoot for party versus party; they're maneuvering.

NO GREAT DIFFERENCE

Marcantonio's flop hasn't amounted to much.

The Republicans thought they gained eighty seats in the House of Representatives—seventy-one Democrats, four Farmer-Laborites and five Progressives. But they didn't realize that they'd lost Marcantonio.

That changes the line-up.

The vote's a mere trifle, but one ballot signifies on a near-tie.

Marcantonio will be a one-party voter in the next House of Representatives. The Farmer-Laborites will be one. The Progressives will be two. Republicans, 169. Democrats, 262.

But the Democrats will be split. The Republicans also, somewhat. The Progressives, the Farmer-Laborite and Marcantonio may register decisively, if they stick together. A balance of power is a mighty effective thing. Usually it doesn't weigh and counterweigh so accurately, but it may this time.

I'm speaking of 1940.

CHAPTER 48

"BOB TOWNE, you have simply got to stop proposing to me every time we meet. I am very happy about the Columbian award. Happy for you. I think you deserve every dollar of it. But that has nothing to do with you and me."

Sara Sue wasn't going to let Bob get into a balmy mood, if she could help it. Men are much more difficult to handle then, if you are by nature kind.

"Aw, but listen, Sara Sue—didn't you hear what Sanders just said? He said—he said it was all right! He congratulated me. You MUST have told him something, didn't you? Come on, this is no time for teasing!"

She sighed heavily.

"I'm not teasing."

"You are."

"I'm not, I tell you. I—I don't want to be flip about it, Bob, you know that. I wouldn't hurt anybody's feelings for the world. But I did not say I would marry you."

"Well, you can say it now, can't you? Grea-a-at glory, Sara Sue, I'm crazy about you! You know I am."

"I ought to, by now." She said it resignedly, looking beyond him.

"Then let's get married. Hunh? . . . Listen, kid—" Bob's voice and manner changed abruptly then. He dropped almost to a whisper, and pleaded as earnestly as he knew how.

Sara Sue knew that he was in earnest, too. She could tell. Most of the time Bob Towne was blustery, noisy, peppery. But Sara Sue was wise enough to know that such an outward manner often covers a fine sensitivity. She had long ago known that it did in Bob Towne.

His softer urging, therefore, stirred and hurt her more than his bluster. She had just forced herself out of one emotional experience, had just stopped crying because she had to turn T. J. Sanders down. It may be flattering, she was reflecting, but it is also nerve rending to have two young men offer you their hearts and souls in the same half hour. Especially if each is a go-getter type, full of energy, strong. She just could not maintain her pose of crusty bantering; the tears came back into her eyes.

And the tears—surprisingly—did the trick.

Big Bob Towne, no spiritual fool even if he was a football man, was pleading as earnestly as he knew how— "and I'll work for you and slave for you, honey; honest I will. I'll be anything you want me to be. I'll have this money—I'm going to ask T. J. to stand up with us, should I?—and it'll be enough to start us out. If you'd rather I finish school, I will; but honey, I wish you would marry me at once and — aw-w-w-w honey! . . . S-Sara Sue! . . . You're—crying!"

He had concluded in a bare whisper. He looked into her eyes for several seconds. She was silent, but he had his final answer.

Slowly he took a handkerchief and blotted her tears. He pleaded no more, spoke no more at all; in fact, never in all his life thereafter did Bob Towne mention this moment to Sara Sue again, never did he again mention, flippantly or otherwise, that he had loved her, wanted her, yearned for her as devotedly as he knew how.

They had been sitting together, even as she and T. J. had been sitting together a few minutes ago. Bob put his hand under her elbow, helped her to rise. Then he patted her shoulder ever so gently. That was all. They started walking toward the ballroom. A hullabaloo there assailed them.

When a dance floor has more than 800 people on it, in all the varying stages of hilarity and motion and happiness and noise, one more man shouting frantically is not likely to be understood on the opposite side of the room. Bob and Sara Sue paid little attention at first. But then the orchestra stopped, heads began to turn, and words began to be clear. The shouting man was moving, and waving a hand.

"SARA SUE . . . WAIT, I TELL YOU! . . . WAIT! . . . I LOVE YOU MYSELF! AND I . . ."

The utterly amazing proclamation startled everyone into silent attention.

Sara Sue began to hear, to understand, to recognize him. "It's Thornton," she murmured, incredulous. "It's Thornton Holgate! . . . What in the world—?"

The shouting man was moving and waving his hands.

The young professor was plowing through people much as he had plowed through salt waves off Galveston; pushing and pulling and swimming, and shouting instructions the while. Wild, frantic instructions. Nobody laughed, yet; nobody quite understood. Was this another gag? Another floor show act? Whatever—?

"Oh, Sara Sue, am I too late? Are you—?"

"Why, Thornton, what in the world is it? Do you realize what you are doing? And saying?" Sara Sue almost shouted herself now. Everyone strained to listen.

"Oh, my darling, I do! I am saying that I love you and want to marry you." He paused momentarily, to swallow and catch his breath. "Is it true that someone—Towne—was proposing to you? Wallace Claims Meddling With Provisions Would Be "Disastrous"

LAST YEAR - REVIEWED

Processing Tax Advised To Continue Source Of Revenue

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16—(UP) Secretary of Agriculture Wallace declared today that agricultural measures proposed as substitutes for the existing program would prove "disastrous" to the country and "would ultimately collapse from the excessive cost."

In his annual report, Wallace referred mainly to the proposal that the government guarantee a "cost of production" price for farm products consumed in this country and 'dump" surpluses on foreign markets at the world price.

The report reviewed comprehensively the activities of the agriculture department during the fiscal year 1938.

Large portions were devoted to a defense of the agricultural administration and the soil conservation, farm tenancy and other correlary programs begun in recent years.

Economic planning, he said, is "the savior rather than the destroyer of democracy in times like these." As a result, he asserted, the country has found "peace" through "instrumentalities that some people take to be the germs of totalitarianism." He denied there is a trend toward "dictatorship in this country.

Opposition Hit

Wallace's words were interpreted by some as a measured attack on opposition elements on Capitol Hill, since they came less than three weeks before the 76th congress begins its work amid insistent demands from Republican and some Democrats that the newest A. A. A. must be amended drastically or repealed.

It followed the general elections at which Republicans regained majority representation in the farm belt and a special referendum at which rice and light tobacco growers by close votes rejected A.A.A. marketing controls. Cotton growers accepted them, however.

The secretary made only vague references to possible legislative recommendations.

He did, however, recommend enactment of processing taxes to provide "a continuing source of revenue" for parity payments.

"Such a tax is one important thing missing from our present farm program," he said.

"Farmers cannot be certain that the parity principle established by congress will be maintained x x x until some arrangement is made whereby the particular commodity concerned bears at least a part of the cost of financing its own program.

"Agitation continues for the diversion of basic agriculture commodities into foreign trade under some two-price systems," Wallace said. "Ten or fifteen years ago the plan might have worked temporarily. The thought then was that an inexhaustable and complacent foreign market would allow goods to be dumped on it immediately. There is no basis for entertaining that thought now.

"Plans that called for immediately for greatly increased agricultural exports could not succeed importing countries would raise their tariffs or would exclude unwanted supplies through quotas and embargoes. World prices would fall. Prices in the United States would have to be fixed at high levels so that the farmers could break even. There would be loud protests from the consumers."

AMERICAN LEAGUE TEAMS TRAINING GUNS ON YANKEE POWERHOUSE

TIGERS "SHOOT WORKS" TO WIN TITLE IN LOOP

Third Base Spot Closed By Acquisition Of Pinky Higgins

NEW YORK, Dec. 16—(UP)—Echoes heard loudest today, as the major league big shots scattered back to their home bases after the annual Winter meetings concerned the efforts of the Red Sox, Indians and Tigers to build up clubs to challenge the Yankees and the definite trend toward night baseball.

Definite indications that Boston, Cleveland and Detroit all hope to end the Yanks' three year reign were furnished by the tenacity with which those three first division clubs hung on until they put over some deals.

The delegates were packing to go home when the Red Sox and Tigers finally engineered their five-player deal, which had been in the state of negotiation for more than a week. The swap sent Third Baseman Pinky Higgins and Pitcher Archie McKain, a southpaw, to the Tigers and gave the Red Sox Pitchers Eldon Auker and Jake Wade and Outfielder Chet Morgan.

"Higgins for Auker"

This deal was essentially a "Higgins for Auker" transaction as the Tigers' desperately needed Higgins to plug the third base gap and the Red Sox were frantic for pitching help to back up baseball's most robust attack. The Red Sox had a club batting average of .299 last season, 25 points better than the Yankees.

As a result of the trading the Yanks' three hottest rivals have these new faces:

Red Sox—Pitchers Auker, Galehouse and Wade; Outfielder Morgan; Infielder Irwin.

Tigers — Pitchers Hutchinson and McKain, Third Baseman Higgins.

Indians—Outfielder Chapman.

By obtaining from Boston, the Indians opened the way for a deal involving Outfielder Earl Averill. The dope is that he'll go to the Tigers, who want a long-range hitting outfielder.

Detroit's program calls for "a shoot the works" pennant bid in 1939. In outbidding the Yanks, Pirates and Cubs for Fred Hutchinson, the Seattle phenom who won 25 and lost 7 in his first year in organized baseball, Owner Walter O. Briggs showed that the Tigers mean business.

The Red Sox are gambling on two youngsters, Third Baseman Jim Tabor, only two years out of Owens' Crossroads, Ala., and Outfielder Ted Williams, to fill important gaps and make their disposal of Higgins and Chapman look good. Tabor, who hit .316 in 19 games last season, has had two years of seasoning at Little Rock and Minneapolis and Scout Billy Evans, who discovered him on the U. of Alabama campus, says he's ready. Williams, bought a year ago from the Coast league, played with Minneapolis last season and led the league in hitting and in about ten other departments. He is hailed as a power hitter of a calibre with Ruth, Gehrig and Greenberg.

Cleveland is quite likely to continue its bartering until the infield is patched up around the keystone sack.

British Title Goes on Foul

WINNER of the British heavyweight champion by virtue of a foul committed by Eddie Phillips, Len Harvey grimaces as he faces the camera after the bout in London. Harvey is well known to American ring fans, having fought several times in this country.

Nova and Farr Tangle; Welshman Is Favorite

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(UP)—Fight astronomers will lug their instruments into Madison Square Garden tonight to record the possible discovery of a great new heavyweight star, as handsome Young Lou Nova tries to knock out Tommy Farr, the Welsh "mule man."

If Nova can knock out Farr or beat him impressively, the crowd will roar its acclaim for the Alameda Adonis of California. Larruping Lou will be hailed as the new "white hope", the million-dollar baby, the man of destiny—who may ultimately dethrone the mighty Negro champion Joe Louis.

Unfortunately Nova is rated the 7-5 underdog in the betting because of his lack of professional experience as compared with the 150 commercial fights in which Farr has engaged. Nova, in two years of scrapping, has weathered 26 professional bouts with only one defeat. Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom won a questionable decision over him.

Farr lost three straight bouts on American soil—to Louis, Jim Braddock and Maxie Baer. But he lasted the distance in each. The Welsh coal miner shook off the explosive blows of the Brown Bomber, the Cinderella man and the Livermore Lotharis. And the betting men figure that Farr will be undamaged by Nova's sophisticated left jab and hammering short right.

However, the Nova admirers emphasize that Lou won more than half of his 26 bouts by the knockout route while Farr is a powder-puff puncher. They recall that Farr cuts fairly easily as did Gunnar Barlund of Finland who lost on a technical knockout in Nova's last trip through the ropes.

This should be a grand brawl in which Nova, determined to become the heavyweight challenger, inspired by his society bridge, faces the desperate Farr, who knows that if he suffers a fourth straight defeat on American soil, he can pack his bags and go back to the coal mines in Wales. Farr is definitely on that big "X" which marks the spot. He'll be in there whanging, although he hasn't fought since last March when Maxie Baer took the decision over him.

SEABISCUIT MAY NOT ENTER RACE AT SANTA ANITA

ARCADIA, Cal., Dec. 16—(UP)—The whisper that Seabiscuit may snub the California Winter season in favor of easier pickings in Florida became a shout today as the 1938 American champion drew top weight of 134 pounds for the fifth running of the Santa Anita handicap.

The load was one pound more than the son of Hard-Tack ever has toted, five pounds above the California scale for a mile and a quarter, and six pounds more than the package handed second-weighted Stagehand, who won the $100,000 stakes from Seabiscuit by a nose a year ago.

The weights ranged from a minimum of 100 pounds and only Stagehand's 128 was within 10 pounds of the sturdy Biscuit, E. E. Fogelson's Dauber, winner of the Preakness, and Sorteado, a $40,000 South American imported by Seabiscuit's owner, Charles S. Howand were bracketed in third position with 124 pounds. A dozen other famed runners were bunched a few pounds behind.

T. D. Taggart's Marica, the year's top mare, and Millsdale stable's Isaroma, undefeated in five starts, came in at 121. Binglyn Stable's Don Mike; Townsend Martin's Cravat, winner of the Jerome; Horace Luro's Vino Puro, and J. J. McKeon's O'Grady, both importations, drew 120; Jacola 119; and Esposa, Thanksgiving and Mrs. J. F. Waters' Beti-Bat, 118.

CHICAGO U. MEETS ONLY THREE BIG TEN TEAMS

CHICAGO, Dec. 16—(UP)—The University of Chicago, whose president recently urged "10-cent football," will play only three Big Ten rivals next season, the complete 1939 schedule showed today.

Besides conference games with Michigan, Ohio State and Illinois, the Maroons will meet only one other major foe—Harvard, which will make its Chicago gridiron debut Oct. 14.

Making its first appearance on a Chicago schedule will be the University of Virginia with whom a home-and-home series has been arranged. Oberlin returns after a 40-year lapse.

SENIORS WIN 27-6

Numbers didn't mean a thing Thursday evening in the high school intramural league when the seniors defeated the eighth grade 27 to 6. Only four seniors were on hand for the contest, while the graders had four full teams, and used them all. Barnes and Ankrom were outstanding for the winners.

THREE RACING BODIES DISCUSSING BIG MERGER

COLUMBUS, Dec. 16—(UP)—Representatives of three bodies governing American harness racing renewed their parleys today to merge harness racing organizations into one ruling body.

Their plans ran into a snag when the American Trotting Association, headed by C. F. Cameron, Alta, Iowa, failed to send a delegate to the meeting Thursday.

The attending delegates, however, expect to draw up a unification proposal and submit it to the American Association at a future date.

Organization officers at the meeting were E. Roland Harriman, Goshen, N. Y., president of the American Trotting Register association; Reese Blizzard, Parkersburg, W. Va., president of the National Trotting association, and George W. Rittenour, Piketon, O., president of the United Trotting association.

McSPADEN AND GEERTSEN LEADING IN MIAMI OPEN

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 16—(UP)—An old golf axiom says that first round leaders seldom become title holders and today it was reflected in odds offered against either Harold (Jug) McSpaden or John Geertsen winning the Miami Open championship.

The bookies do not like a front runner on the fairways. They believe it is harder to take the lead and hold it from the start than it is to snatch victory with a hot round in the stretch. So the pricemakers were not only willing, but eager, to law 12-1 against McSpaden, Winchester, Mass., pro, and 60-1 against Geertsen, a newcomer to the Eastern Winter circuit from Salt Lake City.

These players were held at 16-1 and 200-1 respectively before they fired four-under-par 66's and took a two stroke lead over a star-studded field of 200 in opening 18-hole rounds yesterday.

AMERICAN LEAGUE TEAMS TRAINING GUNS ON YANKEE POWERHOUSE

TIGERS "SHOOT WORKS" TO WIN TITLE IN LOOP

Third Base Spot Closed By Acquisition Of Pinky Higgins

NEW YORK, Dec. 16—(UP)—Echoes heard loudest today, as the major league big shots scattered back to their home bases after the annual Winter meetings concerned the efforts of the Red Sox, Indians and Tigers to build up clubs to challenge the Yankees and the definite trend toward night baseball.

Definite indications that Boston, Cleveland and Detroit all hope to end the Yanks' three year reign were furnished by the tenacity with which those three first division clubs hung on until they put over some deals.

The delegates were packing to go home when the Red Sox and Tigers finally engineered their five-player deal, which had been in the state of negotiation for more than a week. The swap sent Third Baseman Pinky Higgins and Pitcher Archie McKain, a southpaw, to the Tigers and gave the Red Sox Pitchers Eldon Auker and Jake Wade and Outfielder Chet Morgan.

"Higgins for Auker"

This deal was essentially a "Higgins for Auker" transaction as the Tigers' desperately needed Higgins to plug the third base gap and the Red Sox were frantic for pitching help to back up baseball's most robust attack. The Red Sox had a club batting average of .299 last season, 25 points better than the Yankees.

As a result of the trading the Yanks' three hottest rivals have these new faces:

Red Sox—Pitchers Auker, Galehouse and Wade; Outfielder Morgan; Infielder Irwin.

Tigers — Pitchers Hutchinson and McKain, Third Baseman Higgins.

Indians—Outfielder Chapman.

By obtaining from Boston, the Indians opened the way for a deal involving Outfielder Earl Averill. The dope is that he'll go to the Tigers, who want a long-range hitting outfielder.

Detroit's program calls for "a shoot the works" pennant bid in 1939. In outbidding the Yanks, Pirates and Cubs for Fred Hutchinson, the Seattle phenom who won 25 and lost 7 in his first year in organized baseball, Owner Walter O. Briggs showed that the Tigers mean business.

The Red Sox are gambling on two youngsters, Third Baseman Jim Tabor, only two years out of Owens' Crossroads, Ala., and Outfielder Ted Williams, to fill important gaps and make their disposal of Higgins and Chapman look good. Tabor, who hit .316 in 19 games last season, has had two years of seasoning at Little Rock and Minneapolis and Scout Billy Evans, who discovered him on the U. of Alabama campus, says he's ready. Williams, bought a year ago from the Coast league, played with Minneapolis last season and led the league in hitting and in about ten other departments. He is hailed as a power hitter of a calibre with Ruth, Gehrig and Greenberg.

Cleveland is quite likely to continue its bartering until the infield is patched up around the keystone sack.

British Title Goes on Foul

WINNER of the British heavyweight champion by virtue of a foul committed by Eddie Phillips, Len Harvey grimaces as he faces the camera after the bout in London. Harvey is well known to American ring fans, having fought several times in this country.

Nova and Farr Tangle; Welshman Is Favorite

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(UP)—Fight astronomers will lug their instruments into Madison Square Garden tonight to record the possible discovery of a great new heavyweight star, as handsome Young Lou Nova tries to knock out Tommy Farr, the Welsh "mule man."

If Nova can knock out Farr or beat him impressively, the crowd will roar its acclaim for the Alameda Adonis of California. Larruping Lou will be hailed as the new "white hope", the million-dollar baby, the man of destiny—who may ultimately dethrone the mighty Negro champion Joe Louis.

Unfortunately Nova is rated the 7-5 underdog in the betting because of his lack of professional experience as compared with the 150 commercial fights in which Farr has engaged. Nova, in two years of scrapping, has weathered 26 professional bouts with only one defeat. Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom won a questionable decision over him.

Farr lost three straight bouts on American soil—to Louis, Jim Braddock and Maxie Baer. But he lasted the distance in each. The Welsh coal miner shook off the explosive blows of the Brown Bomber, the Cinderella man and the Livermore Lotharis. And the betting men figure that Farr will be undamaged by Nova's sophisticated left jab and hammering short right.

However, the Nova admirers emphasize that Lou won more than half of his 26 bouts by the knockout route while Farr is a powder-puff puncher. They recall that Farr cuts fairly easily as did Gunnar Barlund of Finland who lost on a technical knockout in Nova's last trip through the ropes.

This should be a grand brawl in which Nova, determined to become the heavyweight challenger, inspired by his society bridge, faces the desperate Farr, who knows that if he suffers a fourth straight defeat on American soil, he can pack his bags and go back to the coal mines in Wales. Farr is definitely on that big "X" which marks the spot. He'll be in there whanging, although he hasn't fought since last March when Maxie Baer took the decision over him.

SEABISCUIT MAY NOT ENTER RACE AT SANTA ANITA

ARCADIA, Cal., Dec. 16—(UP)—The whisper that Seabiscuit may snub the California Winter season in favor of easier pickings in Florida became a shout today as the 1938 American champion drew top weight of 134 pounds for the fifth running of the Santa Anita handicap.

The load was one pound more than the son of Hard-Tack ever has toted, five pounds above the California scale for a mile and a quarter, and six pounds more than the package handed second-weighted Stagehand, who won the $100,000 stakes from Seabiscuit by a nose a year ago.

The weights ranged from a minimum of 100 pounds and only Stagehand's 128 was within 10 pounds of the sturdy Biscuit. E. E. Fogelson's Dauber, winner of the Preakness, and Sorteado, a $40,000 South American imported by Seabiscuit's owner, Charles S. Howard were bracketed in third position with 124 pounds. A dozen other famed runners were bunched a few pounds behind.

T. D. Taggart's Marica, the year's top mare, and Millsdale stable's Isaroma, undefeated in five starts, came in at 121. Binglyn Stable's Don Mike; Townsend Martin's Cravat, winner of the Jerome; Horace Luro's Vino Puro, and J. J. McKeon's O'Grady, both importations, drew 120; Jacola 119; and Esposa, Thanksgiving and Mrs. J. F. Waters' Beti-Bat, 118.

CHICAGO U. MEETS ONLY THREE BIG TEN TEAMS

CHICAGO, Dec. 16—(UP)—The University of Chicago, whose president recently urged "10-cent football," will play only three Big Ten rivals next season, the complete 1939 schedule showed today.

Besides conference games with Michigan, Ohio State and Illinois, the Maroons will meet only one other major foe—Harvard, which will make its Chicago gridiron debut Oct. 14.

Making its first appearance on a Chicago schedule will be the University of Virginia with whom a home-and-home series has been arranged. Oberlin returns after a 40-year lapse.

SENIORS WIN 27-6

Numbers didn't mean a thing Thursday evening in the high school intramural league when the seniors defeated the eighth grade 27 to 6. Only four seniors were on hand for the contest, while the graders had four full teams, and used them all. Barnes and Ankrom were outstanding for the winners.

Giants Get Zeke

FOR two rookie players and cash estimated at $20,000 the New York Giants have just acquired Zeke Bonura, heavy hitting first baseman, from the Washington Senators. Jim Carlin, a young first baseman, and Tom Baker, a pitcher, went to the Nats in the deal. Bonura is 30, and his life batting average is around .320.

THREE RACING BODIES DISCUSSING BIG MERGER

COLUMBUS, Dec. 16—(UP)—Representatives of three bodies governing American harness racing renewed their parleys today to merge harness racing organizations into one ruling body.

Their plans ran into a snag when the American Trotting Association, headed by C. F. Cameron, Alta, Iowa, failed to send a delegate to the meeting Thursday.

The attending delegates, however, expect to draw up a unification proposal and submit it to the American Association at a future date.

Organization officers at the meeting were E. Roland Harriman, Goshen, N. Y., president of the American Trotting Register association; Reese Blizzard, Parkersburg, W. Va., president of the National Trotting association, and George W. Rittenour, Piketon, O., president of the United Trotting association.

McSPADEN AND GEERTSEN LEADING IN MIAMI OPEN

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 16—(UP)—An old golf axiom says that first round leaders seldom become title holders and today it was reflected in odds offered against either Harold (Jug) McSpaden or John Geertsen winning the Miami Open championship.

The bookies do not like a front runner on the fairways. They believe it is harder to take the lead and hold it from the start than it is to snatch victory with a hot round in the stretch. So the price-makers were not only willing, but eager, to law 12-1 against McSpaden, Winchester, Mass., pro, and 60-1 against Geertsen, a newcomer to the Eastern Winter circuit from Salt Lake City.

These players were held at 16-1 and 200-1 respectively before they fired four-under-par 66's and took a two stroke lead over a star-studded field of 200 in opening 18-hole rounds yesterday.

CIRCLEVILLE DISPOSAL PLANT TO BE COMPLETED BY JANUARY 6

ALL MACHINERY READY TO OPEN FULL OPERATION

Total Cost Established At $166,363, Government Aiding Project

TREATMENT IS DESCRIBED

Civil Service Tests For Positions To Be Held December 28

Circleville's new disposal plant, under construction since last March, will be ready for operation on Jan. 6, completion date set under terms of the federal grant.

All machinery has been installed in the plant. Work at present consists of connecting up the equipment, installing inside pipes, cleaning up and painting. Installation of machinery in the N. Court street pumping station, connecting northend sewers with the balance of the city system, is still to be completed.

Some details of the project, such as grading and seeding the site, construction of a roadway and other outside work, will be completed when weather conditions permit

Along Scioto River

The new plant is located along the Scioto river at the rear of the Container corporation. Site for the plant was furnished the city by the Container corporation.

Cost of the plant amounts to about $166,363. The city issued $75,000 worth of bonds as its original share of the cost. An allocation of $61,363 was then made by the Public Works Administration. In addition to these amounts the Container corporation, whose wastes will be treated in the plant, paid $15,000 and council issued an additional $15,000 worth of bonds.

Base bid on the plant construction made by the contractor, William Loomis & Son, Logan, was $153,970.73. In addition there were engineering costs, expense of digging a well, advertising, cost of bonds, bonding attorney fees, etc., to be paid.

The plant is constructed above flood stages of the river. Wastes enter the treatment works into what is known as the control building. In this building the wastes will be screened and metered, and chemicals added if necessary to obtain the proper degree of treatment. This building contains also the auxiliary pumping equipment, storage space for chemicals, an office laboratory and the sludge filters. The building is constructed of concrete and brick with a tile roof. It is 31 by 57 feet in size in a one story, basement and sub-basement plan.

From the control building the sewage enters four flocculator tanks. These tanks are 15 feet nine inches long, eight feet nine inches wide, and 10 feet deep. There are also four primary tanks. These are 45 feet four inches long, and 15 feet nine inches wide and have a depth of eight feet.

Pumped Into Tanks

From the latter tanks the treated water flows into the river. Sludge from the settling tanks is pumped to two digestor tanks. They are 35 feet in diameter and are 19 feet six inches deep. These tanks are heated for the production of bacteria. Gas for heating water to keep these tanks at a certain temperature is obtained from the decaying sludge. From the digestor tanks the sludge is taken through filters then removed to a sludge lagoon. The site is inclosed with a six foot wire fence.

Civil service examinations are to be given on Wednesday, Dec. 28, in the council chamber for the position of chemist supervisor and three operators for the plant.

To date councilmen have fixed no schedule of charges to be made for the plant operation.

Screen Actress Ill at Home

RECOVERING from bronchial pneumonia, Phyllis Brooks, rising young screen actress and fiance of Cary Grant, well-known leading man, is confined to her home. Miss Brooks was taken ill on a train which she had boarded in New York where she had gone to meet Grant on his return from Europe.

News Notes of Interest From Ashville, Vicinity

By S. D. FRIDLEY
Phone Ashville 79

Contacted a Fourth Grade school boy who was resting comfortably in one of the offices here. When we asked about the Old Man with the white whiskers and reindeer, said he had already seen him and got the presents he had asked for but wouldn't object if the Old Gent wanted to come again. Without hesitating a bit told us that 63 equaled 9 times 7. Said the teacher in his grade had a nice paddle for bad boys, but that he had got past so far without it. When we named over a few things that maybe he'd like to be when he grew up, shied at the preacher stuff but wouldn't object to lawyer or doctor. He hesitated when we presented pad and pencil to him for his name and home town, if any, but finally wrote it when we promised not to tell a word about it, and we are doing just just that. He is one among the fine youngsters we meet most every day.

Ashville

The Christmas exercises at the Church of Christ in Christian Union will be held on Friday evening, December 23.

Ashville

Honoring John D. Johnson, 78 years young on his birthday, the first of the week, Roy and Mrs. White, Darby township, entertained for the honor guest and Alec Redman and wife of Derby. Mr. Redman is 85 years of age and the wife 82. And Mr. Johnson said a lot of years had piled up for him and the Redmans, a total of 245, he thought, if he'd figured right.

Ashville

Another power plant worker is to remove with his family to Ashville in the near future. In making the count it is found there are about 25 family workers at either Walnut or Pickaway who reside here. But Elmer Malone says this newcomer, whoever he may be, will have to appear before the court and be subject to inspection. The Power Plant family doesn't want "just any old thing" for a neighbor.

Ashville

Doctor Homer Peters, veterinarian, and his son George of St. Paul, were visitors at headquarters. The doctor is now and has been for the last ten years employed by the state, assisting along with eleven others in stamping out tuberculosis in cattle. These veterinarians usually have their working territory assigned to them by the chief, but in an emergency, may be called anywhere. Mr. Peters thinks it is not likely that the late "political upheavel" will much change his department and work.

Ashville

William (Bill to everybody) Abbott, our reliable gardener for these many years and best variety sweet corn grower of them all, is now at his home on the East Side. Johnny Jones has been assisting Mr. Abbott about the place and sees to it that he is well cared for. This venerable resident has been here in the community for 83 years.

CARY GRANT SIGNED

Cary Grant, one of the screen's most versatile leading men, is the second star to be signed for a new show beginning Sunday, Jan. 15. Like Carole Lombard, who was signed a few days ago, he will be a regular member of the cast of the full hour broadcasts over the NBC red network at 10 p. m. each Sunday.

This is Grant's first radio series although he has appeared as a guest star at the microphone a number of times. Still other stars will be signed for the show before its premiere in January.

GLADYS SWARTHOUT

Anything can happen on the Eddie Cantor program when Gladys Swarthout, famed Metropolitan Opera star makes a return visit to the Cantor program, Monday night, Dec. 19, via CBS at 7:30 p. m. The last time an opera star, Martinelli, visited the Cantor program, he sang "Diani." Thus far there isn't the slightest notion as to just what Miss Swarthout will sing. Bert "Mad Russian" Gordon will try to impress Miss Swarthout with his medical knowledge. Mr. Guffy will annoy Cantor, and Fairchild and Carroll will provide one of their piano duos.

JACK HALEY SOUTHERN

Jack Haley turns southern, suh, tonight over CBS, at 7:30. Aided by those two flowers of the south, "Carry-me-back-to-old - Virginny" Verrill and Lucille Ball, plus Arty Auerbach, Haley will wind up with a southern classic that defies all Dixie tradition and makes short work of the long story known as "Gone With the Wind." Virginia Verrill will sing "It's Wonderful Weather for Love" with Ted Fio Rito supplying the musical background.

ROBINSON, MORRIS

"Kid Galahad," roaring romantic prize fight drama, is the attraction in the Radio Theatre next Monday, with Edward G. Robinson, Wayne Morris, Joan Bennett and Andrea Leeds in the starring roles, and Jack Dempsey in a between-the-acts interview. Edward G. Robinson as the fight manager, Wayne Morris as the slugging Kid, Joan Bennett as the Broadway-wise Fluff, and Andrea Leeds as the girl who doesn't know a 6-ounce glove from a bottle of smelling salts, give the piece a four star cast.

Cecil B. DeMille directs the play which will be broadcast over the Columbia network at 9 p. m.
